NEWS BRIEFS

Rocky Calls LBJ 'Ringmaster'

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller accused the Democrats Wednesday of a dismal record of failure at home and abroad.

Stepping up his drive for the Republican presidential nomination, Rockefeller pictured the administration as "riding two horses going in the opposite direction."

"And the stunt man," he added, "is that old political ringmaster—Lyndon B. Johnson."

Earlier, Rockefeller demanded that the administration clarify its policies on Southeast Asia.

He told a news conference he was disturbed over what he termed news management in an effort to hid the fact that the war in South Viet Nm is going badly.

TV Smoking Ads Not For Teens

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP)— The television industry altered its code of ethics Wednesday to prevent programming and cigarette advertising that might encourage young people to take up smoking.

The board of television directors of the National Association of Broadcasters adopted two code amendments which were recommended by the code board in Miami Beach last week.

The programming section of the code was amended to read: "Care should be exercised so that cigarette smoking will not be depicted in a manner to impress the youth of our country as a desirable habit worthy of imitation."

Cease Fire Status Shaken

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP)—Trouble on the cease-fire lines in Borneo is jeopardizing agreements reached on Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy's peace efforts in Malaysia.

Both Indonesia and Malaysia had complaints Wednesday.

President Sukarno of Indonesia, whose idea is that opposing forces should stand pat, objected in Jakarta to Malaysian calls by radio and air-dropped messages for Indonesian-backed guerrillas to surrender.

Malaysia announced two violations i n Sabah-North Borneo of the order for a halt in the shooting at midnight last Saturday.

Barry Doubts Red Version

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater—an Air Force jet pilot himself—said Wednesday night it is "hard to believe" the U.S. trainer downed in East Germany Tuesday really got lost.

"I don't know what they were doing over East Germany," said the Arizona senator. The State Department had said the plane was obviously lost.

Goldwater, here to address a Republican fund-raising dinner, told a news conference "it's kind of hard to believe that all your navigational equipment would go out at once on that airplane."

The Russians already have rejected a U.S. protest. The Soviet Union says its fighters forced down the T-39 and all three men aboard were killed.

Alan Ladd Dies At 50

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) —Alan Ladd, who rose from a $42.50 movie laborer to a $25,000-a-week star, died Wednesday, apparently of a heart attack.

Ladd, 50, a man Horatio Alger would have loved, was found dead in bed by his butler. The actor had been in Palm Springs for 10 days recuperating from a knee injury.

Dr. Joseph Sage and Police Chief A. G. Kettmann said the actor apparently died of natural causes, presumably a heart attack.

Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Profit-taking overtook a top-heavy stock market Wednesday and prices suffered their worst loss of the year while trading slackened.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which made historic highs in the five previous sessions, fell 5.18 to 782.60.

Volume was off 4.45 million shares from 4.73 million Tuesday.

PICKET LINE TROUBLE — One of a series of clashes is about to happen during picketing in Cleveland's school integration difficulties. An unidentified man, whom another tries to restrain, grabs the arm of a picket in front of East Side grade school. The pickets, representing the United Freedom Movement, want full integration of Negro students who are being transported from overcrowded school in Negro community to three predominantly white schools. Several people were knocked to the ground before police restored order. (AP Wirephoto)

Saigon Junta Falls In Coup

Army General Leads Bloodless Uprising

SAIGON (AP) — Troops and armored vehicles occupied Saigon Thursday, apparently carrying out a bloodless coup d'etat against the revolutionary junta that has ruled South Viet Nam since Nov. 1.

Military sources said the coup, which began before dawn, successfully ended by 8:00 a.m. local time.

The newest uprising was said to have been led by Maj. Gen. Nguyen Khahn, commander of the 1st Army Corps in the northernmost part of the country

According to first fragmentary reports, Nguyen Khanh carried out his power play against pro-French elements in the junta, notably Maj. Gen. Le Ven Kim, second and third in command, respectfully, of the junta.

No violence or shooting was reported in any part of the country.

U.S Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge apparently was informed of an impending coup late Wednesday night.

The interior minister, Jam. Gen. Ton That Dinh, also was believed under arrest and possibly scheduled for deportation from South Viet Nam.

The top officer in the junta, Maj. Gen. Dong Van Minh Big Minh, apparently remains in power but possibly as little more than a figurehead.

Minh's residence was surrounded by tanks long before dawn.

The change in power structure was believed to be essentially pro-American and anti-French.

Khahn's forces apparently consist of airborne troops from south of Saigon, elements of the Mekong River delta 7th Division marines, and other forces.

Saigon airport was closed immediately and no flights were allowed in or out.

Rumors quickly spread through the city that a counter-coup might be in preparation.

As of midmorning, Saigon Radio still had said nothing about the coup and Saigon appeared normal except for tanks and troops in some areas.

In the pre-dawn movements, several police headquarters were surrounded by tanks and tank muzzles were pointed down major streets at many intersections.

For the most part, their crews appeared relaxed and not preparing for a fight, however.

Demonstrations in Saigon were banned last week after a series of anti - French street marches were held by students.

The provisional government and the armed forces high command were reshuffled Jan. 6 in an attempt to speed up the war against the Communist Viet Cong.

On Jan. 9, Premier Nguyen Ngoc Tho pledged military and civil reforms, long advocated by the United States, in a "State of the Nation" address.

The Vietnamese government on Tuesday denounced France for recognizing Red China, banned further imports of French goods and said it was considering other measures.

GOP Blasts Johnson In 'Go-Day' Rallies

WASHINGTON (AP)—Republican leaders slammed the Democrats on Wednesday night at "Go-Day" rallies across the country, and called for a GOP victory surge in 1964.

President Johnson was accused of lack of true leadership, and of perpetrating "Operation Hoodwink" on the people.

The Republicans gathered for 21 fund-raising dinners, linked by closed-circuit television. Besides stirring up enthusiasm for the cause, the hope was to wipe out a $225,000 deficit left over from the 1960 presidential campaign.

Here are some highlights from the prepared talks:

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, speaking from Los Angeles:

"Now it appears we're going to see the greatest trick of all time: riding two horses going in opposite directions.

"And the stunt man is that old political ringmaster—Lyndon B. Johnson.

"It is time to expose this Operation Hoodwink. He's going to have programs for everything—but he's going to spend less money!"

Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, speaking from Pittsburgh:

"This is the time that will tell whether there are to be two parties in this nation, or whether one will elect in perpetuity while the other mutters in obscurity.

"There are two paths that face us and a great choice to be made between them.

"One path is toward growing control, coercion, regulation, and regimentation by the executive branch of the federal government.

"The other path is toward increased freedom by an increase of reliance on individual responsibility, initiative, creatively and integrity."

Gov. George W. Romney of Michigan, speaking from Washington:

"America today is not the America that our divinely inspired forefathers envisioned. Mighty as it is, it is but a shadow of its promise.

"When we honestly face the deterioration in personal responsibility, individual morality, family life, public integrity and faith in American principles, it is clear our nation needs new leadership and new goals.

"In 1964, the $64 question is: Must the American people wait for needed political leadership until the full consequences of our present excesses produce another crisis?"

Chairman William E. Miller of the Republican National Committee, speaking from Cleveland:

"The Republican word tonight is 'go.' " This is the starting line from which we will race down the length of the track, to cross the finish line in victory in November.

"It may be a photo finish. I'm not going to stand here and tell you that this critical campaign will be any walkaway.

"But if we get off the mark tonight and keep driving, we will win."

Panama Talks Halt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Panama charged Wednesday night the United States had committed aggression against its civilian population and asked for a conference of hemisphere foreign ministers.

Miguel Moreno, Panama's ambassador to the Organization of American States, delivered the request to OAS Secretary-General Jose A. Mora in a two-minute ceremony at OAS headquarters. Moreno declared:

"We have searched for a dignified solution to the controversy but unfortunately and in spite of the good offices of the Inter-American Peace Committee and our willingness we have achieved no success."

The Panamanian diplomat said he asked that the OAS call a foreign ministers conference as soon as possible.

Earlier, Moreno reported talks conducted by the committee had collapsed.

Shortly before the breakdown, President Johnson conferred with leaders of both parties on the developing crisis.

The President and State Department aides gave the leaders a report on efforts to arrive at an agreement with the Panamanian government of President Roberto Chiari.

The Peace Committee met Wednesday afternoon but was unable to break the deadlock between United States and Panama.

Moreno said the note delivered Wednesday night reiterated charges addressed to the OAS Jan. 9 by Panama's Foreign Minister Galileo Solis.

In the Jan. 9 note, Solis said "The Republic of Panama has been the victim of an unprovoked armed attack against its territory and civil population, made by the armed forces of the United States of America stationed in the Canal Zone."

President Johnson has said U.S. troops were faced by sniper fire and mob action and repelled aggression but did not commit it.

Dewey Raps Democrats For Cuba

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential candidate in 1944 and 1948, blamed the Democrats Wednesday night for failing to drive Fidel Castro from power in Cuba. He said under Democratic leadership since 1960, "we have been successfully insulted, humiliated and held up to scorn in Zanzibar, Cambodia, Vietnam and Panama."

Dewey, former New York governor, told a Republican fund-raising dinner, "we can't afford to let this go on; the free world cannot afford it." He added:

"We ought to pull up our socks and act like responsible, intelligent Americans again. We have the great nuclear and missile power which the Republicans built up. It is time we recovered our sense of purpose, our skill and our courage in using our brains and our power to preserve the peace."

Harmless Cigarette Study Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) —Tobacco state governors and congressmen discussed the government's recent report, "Smoking and Health," with Surgeon General Luther L. Terry on Wednesday and both sides could not have been more polite.

No one challenged the facts and figures issued recently by a 10-man blue ribbon science panel to conclude that heavy cigarette smoking is the principal cause of cancer of the lungs and a health hazard calling for remedial action.

To a man, the governors and congressmen called for a crash program of research to find a way to make cigarettes harmless.

Terry backed the research program and conceded there is much to be learned such as: "I would give a great deal to know whether the types of tobacco used for pipes and cigars have anything to do with the lesser hazards associated with these modes of tobacco use."

Ike Mum On GOP Hopeful

DETROIT (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower said Wednesday he is confident the United States has "just as good missiles as there are in the world" and that he believes France's recognition of Communist China is "a vast mistake."

Eisenhower roamed over these and a number of other subjects at a news conference. He was in Detroit to address a $100-a-plate Republican fund-raising dinner Wednesday night.

Eisenhower said he was "not going to put my finger on—for or against—anybody" in the 1964 presidential race until after the GOP's San Francisco convention.

Asked for comment on President Lyndon B. Johnson's 1964-65 budget, Eisenhower said that "anything that actually cuts down on federal spending is for the good," and added:

"We must stop deficit spending . . . we need stabilization . . . we must pay off this unconscionable debt."

On the propriety of President Johnson's acceptance of a hi-fi set from an insurance salesman-friend of Bobby Baker, former secretary of the Senate majority the former President said:

"We all exchange gifts . . . we should not be too ready to throw stones . . . the only question is if an individual accepts enough to indicate he is a kept man."

Reds Shoot Down U. S. Plane; 3 Die

WIESBADEN, Germany (AP The Russians disclosed on Wednesday a Soviet fighter forced down a U.S. Air Force trainer in Communist East Germany on Tuesday, killing all three officers aboard.

Washington declared the T39 was shot down and protested "in the strongest terms." The Russians rejected the protest immediately.

Unarmed Plane

The U.S. plane was not armed, an Air Force spokesman in Washington said.

Gen. Paul L. Freeman Jr., Army commander in chief in Europe, insisted the Russians open an immediate investigation and called for a reply "on a most urgent basis."

The fate of the twin-jet trainer was disclosed in a stiff Soviet note released in Moscow, accusing U.S. military authorities of gross provocation "aimed at aggravating the situation in central Europe."

Shot Down?

The Soviet note did not say specifically that the trainer was shot down. But the State Department declared it was shot down, was obviously lost and was "no threat of any sort to the Soviets."

Rejecting the protest, Georgi M. Kornienko, minister-counsellor of the Soviet Embassy in Washington, told newsmen, "It was a clear intrusion, the plane was intercepted and then it did not obey two orders."

Dead in the latest flareup of the cold war were these three veteran fliers:

Lt. Col. Gerald K. Hannaford, 41, Austin, Tex.; Capt. John F. Lorraine Jr., 34, Jacksonville, Fla., and Capt. Donald G. Millard, 33, Ukiah, Calif. Hannaford and Millard were completing training in the craft with Lorraine as instructor.

The plane crashed near Erfurt, East Germany, about 140 miles northeast of its takeoff on a flight from the Wiesbaden air base. Air Force officials said it had run into a storm.

Cold War

The incident came at a time of a so-called thaw in the cold war and immediately raised tempers in Washington. Some members of Congress declared the case showed there was no letup in the cold war.

Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said the downing of the plane "has all the earmarks of premeditated, unnecessary and cold-blooded murder."

The Soviet note mentioned only one Soviet fighter, but Freeman's letter to the Russians said, "Radar tracks show that two interceptor planes pursued the plane which subsequently crashed in the vicinity of Erfurt."

Freeman sent his letter to Col. Gen. Ivan Yakubovsky, the Soviet commander in Germany. Freeman said the plane strayed into East Germany inadvertently. He said nothing about the possibility it was shot down.

Try To Communicate

"Efforts were immediately made to inform the crew of its error,' ' Freeman said, "and to guide the plane back across the demarcation line. It was impossible to contact the plane by radio, however, presumably due to a communications failure."

State Begins Hunt For Industries

HARRISBURG (AP) — State Commerce Secretary John K. Tabor painted a bright future Wednesday for Pennsylvania's economy including what he calls the best program in the nation for attracting new industry.

"Prospect-hunting visits to 10 principal industrial areas throughout the country are scheduled for this year," Tabor disclosed at legislative hearings on the Scranton Administration's proposed $1.168 billion budget.

The State Mines Department outlined plans for a sweeping new research program, including two pilot plants, to fight the problem of burning culm piles.

A $500,000 plant is being planned for the burning dump at Ashley, said H. Beecher Charmbury, mines secretary.

Scranton has asked for $325,000 in supplementary funds for the current budget to help fight the problem.

Genevieve Blatt, secretary of internal affairs, told legislators the administration cut her department's budget by some $206,000 without any explanation.

Good Morning!

Miss Blatt Wary Of Woman As President

HARRISBURG (AP) — Genevieve Blatt, internal affairs secretary and the first female to be elected to a state office in Pennsylvania, feels there is a place for women in politics, but she doubts that the place is the presidency right now.

Someday, maybe, she told the Associated Press, but not just yet.

It would take a qualified candidate and a receptive electorate to send a woman to the White House, the three-term secretary theorized, and she questioned whether the voters were receptive enough at present.

She was commenting on the candidacy of Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Maine, for the GOP presidential nomination.

While Miss Blatt considered Sen. Smith to be an "outstanding, capable and gifted woman," she did have reservations about her candidacy.

"I feel she's not a serious candidate for the presidency," Miss Blatt explained, adding:

"I feel no one should run for public office who is not a serious candidate. It's difficult for the voter to make an intelligent choice in any event. I don't feel an undue burden should be placed on him by cluttering up the choices."

But Miss Blatt qualified her reaction by saying: "I'm sure Sen. Smith has given this serious thought. Maybe she sees aspects of it that I don't. I feel sure if she were a man she would have been considered probably long before this."

She said she feels "there ought to be a great many more women running for office."

"It's not the place for every woman, but it's not the place for every man, either," she said.

"There are more qualified women around than actually seek public office. I'm talking about the older women without family responsibilities, the women who can devote their day to the service of their municipal government."

Local government, she said, is the place the female can make a true contribution.

The offices open to women at the state and national levels are limited, she said, but as more women gained experience in local government, the more qualified they would be to seek a higher office.

U. S. Leads In Space Weightlifting Race

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) —The great Saturn 1 rocket hurled the world's heaviest man-made satellite into orbit today, giving the United States added fire power to challenge the Soviet Union in the man-to-the-moon race.

President Johnson watched the launching on a television set in his White House office in Washington and then issued a statement hailing it as a "giant step forward for the United States space effort."

Johnson described it as the largest payload ever launched by any nation and said this country has now "proved we have the capability of putting great payloads into space." He congratulated the space team on behalf of "a grateful and proud nation."

Ahead Of Reds

In the opinion of many U.S. experts, the striking success of the colossal booster on its first two-stage test flight gave the United States a lead over the Soviets in rocket power.

While the Saturn I recorded its significant success, another Cape Kennedy crew prepared for Thursday's scheduled launching of the Ranger 6 space craft to the moon.

Ranger 6 is slated to ride an Atlas-Agena rocket skyward at 10:12 a.m., EST on a 66-hour, quarter-million-mile photographic journey.

As the space craft approaches the moon Sunday morning it is to transmit more than 3,000 detailed photos of the lunar surface in the first of several such flights planned to locate the best landing areas for astronauts.

After taking its pictures, Ranger 6 is to crash-land on the moon.

Moon Astronauts

As forerunner of the Saturn 5 rocket which will carry U.S. spacemen to the moon late in this decade, the Saturn 1 success Wednesday was a major step toward that goal.

The $17.3-million rocket, 161 feet tall and weighing 562 tons, unquestionably was the most powerful rocket ever launched. It responded to months of grooming by propelling into the sky a 37,700-pound satellite that is nearly three times heavier than the previous space heavyweight champion, the 14,292-pound Soviet Sputniks 7 and 8.

The 84-foot long satellite was mostly deadweight with a radio beacon for tracking purposes. Included in the payload were 11,600 pounds of Florida sand for nose cone ballast and the burned-out second-stage rocket casing, 13,500 pounds.

Although the giant satellite has no scientific value, its presence above the earth is clear proof that the United States has progressed rapidly since six years ago when the largest payloads it could push into orbit were the 31-pound Explorer 1 and the 3-pound Vanguard 1 satellites. It also is dramatic evidence of America's capability for the future.

Power Pack

The first stage, a cluster of eight engines, generated full thrust of 1.5 million pounds for the first time. That is equal to about 34 million horsepower, enough to power more than 200,000 standard automobiles. Four earlier first-stage tests built up 1.3 million pounds of thrust.

The high-energy liquid hydrogen second stage was ignited for the first time with a 90,000-pound thrust kick. The stage has six engines which burn high-energy liquid hydrogen, a fuel which produces 40 per cent more punch than conventional chemical rocket fuels like the kerosene burned by the booster stage.

The rocket was the first in the Saturn series to carry a satellite. The weight far exceeded that of the heaviest previous U.S. satellite, the 10,200-pound Centaur launched last November. The Saturn 1 satellite is within an orbit ranging from 162 to 467 miles above the earth and space officials said that at dawn and dusk it may be seen as bright as the planet Venus in areas over which it passes.

Because of its heavy weight and low orbit, the satellite is not expected to stay up more than a few days.

Thousands Watch

Pouring a torrent of flame from its first-stage power plant, it labored slowly upward at 11:25 a.m. It required nearly 10 seconds to travel the first 300 feet, but picked up speed swiftly as its engines gulped tons of fuel.

A tail of flame more than 300 feet long gushed from the mammoth vehicle as it lumbered into a low-hanging cloud bank after 40 seconds of flight.

Their purchase is part of the equipment acquisition included in the $120 million capital expenditures program for 1964 announced recently by Stuart T. Saunders, board chairman

Scranton Rapped For 'Politics'

WAYNESBURG, Pa. (UPI)—Aroused officials of Local 6321, United Mine Workers, were Wednesday promised by Greene County Dist. Atty. Bertram Waychoff that he would ask that the trial of four Robena mine supervisors charged with violating the state mining code be scheduled for March term for court. The charges developed from the deaths of 37 miners at the U.S. Steel Mine.

The local officials had asked Gov. William W. Scranton to "forget playing politics" and carry out the responsibilities of the state. They demanded "action," obviously nettled because the trial was scheduled for last September and was delayed several times.

Gov. Scranton Accuses President Of Using Economic Doubletalk

INDIANAPOLIS, Inc. (AP) — Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton, often referred to as the brightest darkhorse on the Republican presidential horizon, accused the Johnson administration Wednesday of subjecting the American people to economic doubletalk.

In a speech at one of a number of GOP fund-raising dinners held Wednesday night throughout the country, Scranton declared:

"If we (Republicans) tell our story effectively, the American people will recognize the present administration's economy program for the mirage that it is."

The Democrats in 1932 elected Franklin D. Roosevelt on a promise of balanced budgets and economy in government but forgot about the pledge as soon as he took office, Scranton said.

"I submit that Americans are being subject to the same doubletalk today."

Later, in a closed circuit television address to other dinner sites, Scranton appealed to Republicans to take the positive road to victory in the presidential campaign.

"It's time we begin to stress the great positive accomplishments of modern Republicanism," he said in his prepared four-minute remarks.

"The Republican Party was made to move, not to stand; to be positive, not to negate; to create, not to destroy.

"The Republican Party is important not because of what it is against, but because of what it is for."

The governor, who steadfastly has denied any designs on the party's nomination, although he has said he would accept a "sincere and honest draft," addressed most of his dinner remarks to the "economic issues" which the GOP can present in the 1964 campaign.

"Traditionally . . . the Democrats have been the party of inflation and soft money," he said.

The Republican Party, he said stands for "genuine fiscal reponsibility and honest balanced budgets . . . a dynamic fiscal conservatism."

Scranton appealed for Republicans to undertake "a mammoth campaign" of economic education.

If the party can point out what he termed the inherent dangers in defunct spending, Scranton claimed it "would soon have 80 million allies among the American people."

At the same time, Scranton repeated a position he has espoused in most of his out-of-state speaking engagements — a redistribution of the federal tax dollar.

The simple truth is that "state governments can't afford to undertake what we claim to be their responsibility," he said. "They don't have the money."

Saying that 70 cents of every tax dollar goes to the federal government, while "the states limp along like poor relations on 17 cents," Scranton urged:

"If we really believe in government action on the lowest possible level, we Republicans ought to advocate a new . . . assignment of tax sources to the various levels of government.

"I'm talking about coming up with a specific concrete tax program that gives more revenues to the state governments than they presently get."

Car Sticker Deadline Friday

HARRISBURG (AP) — All passenger cars and station wagons registered in Pennsylvania must bear new inspection stickers by midnight Friday or they will be in violation of the law.

The warning was issued yesterday by Revenue Secretary Theodore B. Smith Jr., who said there would be no extension of the deadline.

Penn President's Office Picketed

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The campus chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) picketed the office of the president of the University of Pennsylvania Wednesday to reinforce demands that contractors be forced to halt alleged discrimination on school building projects.

Dr. Gaylord P. Harnwell, president of the 18,000 - student university, rejected the demands, invited the NAACP to sit in with him on talks with contractors, and termed their rejection of the invitation "uncooperative."

35 March

About 35 pickets marched in a circle around a statue of Benjamin Franklin in front of the administration building. An estimated 50 students watched quietly.

The NAACP charged that unions employed by the contractors working on university buildings discriminated against Negroes. The group demanded that 60 per cent of apprentices be Negroes or that the university cancel the contracts within 30 days.

Harnwell rejected both demands and said the university "cannot accept the campus chapter of NAACP as a judicial body of higher authority than the agencies established by law."

He referred to the Human Relations Commissions of Philadelphia and Pennsylvania which have been conferring with the university to determine if there is discrimination as charged by the NAACP.

The university has a non-discrimination clause in its contracts with the builders.

A similar move against Philadelphia city construction projects by Negro groups last year resulted in cancellation of construction contracts by the city until the unions involved agreed to hire qualified Negro workmen and apprentices.

Mine Toll Hit 284 Last Year

WASHINGTON (AP) A total of 284 men were killed during 1963 at the nation's bituminous, lignite, and anthracite mines. The figure was five fewer than the 1962 total although the production increased.

The Bureau of Mines made the figures public Tuesday, putting 1963 production at 471,305,000 tons and the fatality rate at .6 per million tons produced. The 1962 production was 439,971,826 tons and the rate was .66.

A drop of 10 in the number of fatalities occurring in surface operations more than accounted for the total 1963 decrease. The number of underground deaths increased by one, to a total of 245. As usual, the greatest cause of death was from falls of roof, face, or rib. Such falls claimed 136 lives, or 23 more than in 1962.

Quit Smoking For Lovely Legs

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)— If you want lovelier legs, girls, quit smoking.

That's the word from Dr. Jay Vizer, president of the Greater Philadelphia Pediatry Association.

It works this way: stop smoking and you have fewer leg pains; fewer leg pains, better muscle tone; better muscle tone, more walking; more walking, prettier legs.

And prettier legs — more whistles.

Since the beginning of the automotive manuacturing industry in the United States in 1896, more than 208 million vehicles have been produced.

Tests Slated For 5 Charged With Killing

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP)—Five youths charged in the death of a house parent at the Kis Lyn Industrial School apparently won't be brought to trial until at least the April session of criminal court.

This was brought out Wednesday when their court-appointed lawyer asked for authority to have the youths tested at the Children's Service Center.

Trial for the five, former inmates, was to have begun Friday at the opening session of the February term.

Richard Mummey of Ringtown, John Thomas of Avoca, Anthony Bartol of Freeland, Charles Derr of Reading and Harold Daurenheim of Wilkes-Barre, are accused in the Dec. 5, 1963, attack on Clayton E. Kelshaw of Weatherly, a house parent at Kis Lyn. He was struck from behind while supervising boys working at the school's pig barn. Kelshaw died two days later.

The youths' lawyer said that to properly prepare the defense complete mental and intelligence tests will be needed.

Won't Operate Celebrity Club

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Lillian Reis agreed Wednesday she would not operate her Celebrity Room night club any time in the future. The district attorney's office then agreed not to prosecute legal action to padlock the club.

Such agreement was reached between Miss Reis' attorney, Robert F. Simone, and the district attorney's office. The agreement, however, does not preclude Miss Reis from entertaining in any other location in Philadelphia "in a lawful manner."

Labor Urges Delay On Jobless Bill

HARRISBURG (AP)—Organized labor is seeking to have unemployment compensation reform put off for another year.

Harry Boyer, president of the Pennsylvania AFL-CIO, recently wrote to the 210 members of the General Assembly asking their support in deferment of the controversial issue, but Gov. Scranton is reported ready to call a special session on the subject next week.

In his letter, Boyer said so controversial a subject "should not be considered in an atmosphere of partisanship," pointing out that this is a big election year on the state and national levels.

Boyer also claimed that the unemployment compensation fund is not as bad off as the administration claims, despite $167 million in interest - free loans owed to the federal government.

"During 1962 the fund gained $34 million and 1963 showed a $32 million gain in income over benefit payments, and the prospects for 1964 are similarly bright," said Boyer, adding:

"Every economic indicator forecasts a continuance and improvement of the present employment situation."

The Bureau of Employment Security reported last week that the fund, which once stood at $639 million, was down to $142 million, counting the $167 million in federal loans.

Boyer also attacked features of the Scranton proposals, which he said, would cost workmen $55 million yearly in benefits and that employes would have increases on a downward sliding scale costing $35 million more the first year and $4 million yearly in the future.

Lowest towns in the world are villages along the Dead Sea, 1,286 feet below feet level.

People In The Spotlight

Jack Ruby, who is standing trial for the murder of Lee Oswald is listening to his attorney.

When he was moved from jail to a hospital for psychiatric tests, this week, he was met by a battery of newsmen who fired questions at him.

But Ruby, who killed the man who allegedly killed President Kennedy said simply, "Don't you think it's proper for me to have my attorneys here when I answer questions? I wish I could answer your questions now but I'm under instructions from my counsel not to."

And he didn't answer.

Byron De La Beckwith, accused of slaying Medgar Evers, negro civil rights leader in Mississippi is under close guard, as his trial gets underway in Jackson, Miss.

Defense for the fertilizer saleman is trying to get as many white men on the jury as possible. So far, seven white men have been picked for the jury.

The first negro to be questioned as a prospective juror was excused because his father had been a murder victim.

Robert Scott, the only negro ever to run for office in Lawtey, Florida and win election as a town councilman last December 3, resigned this week, three weeks after he took office.

Scott said he resigned his two-year term because he continued to receive telephone threats and "was afraid not to resign."

Mayor Charles Shuford, who received the negro's resignation said he did not attempt to influence him one way or another. "I didn't want to encourage him to stay in office because if something were to happen, I wouldn't want to be responsible for encouraging him to stay."

James T. Reymer, 30 year old folk singer is charged with murder in the first degree in the jealousy slaying of a 17-year-old girl in Washington.

After young Bonnie Bell was killed an intensive search for the killer got underway.

The girl's father got a phone call from the slayer "begging his forgiveness." A short time later, the folk singer showed up at the Arlington police station and deposited his 38 caliber pistol on the counter in front of the desk sergeant.

Mike Mansfield, senate majority leader, says fast progress is being made in writing a report on the $11.5 billion tax cut recommended by President Johnson.

The Montana Democrat, so eager to get the tax bill cut through the senate, said the Senate will meet "early and late" on the bill and probably have Saturday sessions.

The modern era of expressways in the United States began in 1940 with the opening of the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

Rader Lists Four Major Problems Facing Monroe's Commissioners

By Jim Ottaway Jr.
Daily Record Editor

(This is the fourth of a special series on plans and problems of the new county board of commissioners.)

EFFORT — What are the major problems facing Monroe County commissioners?

Stanley B. Rader, chairman of the board of commissioners, listed them in this order:

1. Planning on the county and township level.
2. Making the county assessment system work, without favoritism.
3. Reforming administration of the Monroe County Home for the Aged in Kellersville and speeding construction of the new addition.
4. Improving operations of the Pocono Mountains Airport at Mt. Pocono.

County Planning

Rader said before his re-election in November that he believed Monroe County needs an active planning commission. He still believes it and put action on planning for the future growth of the county first on his list on things that must be done.

"We are blessed here with an interstate highway system which makes Monroe County a hub for transportation. I don't think there are many counties in the nation that have four-lane interstate highways going north, south, east and west.

"On top of that the Tocks Island Dam, and possibly the National Recreation Area will bring a big influx of population and industry into the area," Rader said.

"We must plan for this growth so that it does not overrun or spoil the area," he said.

Rader said the commissioners are now studying a number of names suggested for the nine-man county planning commission, which has been without a member since Jan. 1, 1961.

The new board plans to reactivate the commission and appoint new members soon.

Not Political

"This must not be political. We need the best men and minds in the county. We are now selecting a board, but can't name everyone who has been suggested. I hope those who are not named will cooperate in the future and help us," Rader said.

Rader believes the commission should get information on present and future county problems and draw up "a good master plan which the county and townships can study and decide if they want to follow it or use part of it."

He feels the county planning commission should not adopt any county - wide codes, but should leave action on specific laws to the townships now.

Assessment System

Rader's second agenda item is making the county assessment system stick and work according to the formal system set up by the J. L. Jacobs Co.

"I fully support the present Jacobs plan for which the county paid a lot of money. We must stick to it," Rader said.

"There will be no interference, no favoring of friends or politics," Rader said, asserting that this had been done by the two Democratic county commissioners with whom he served his first term on the board. They were John R. Lesoine and Willard Quick.

"No friends or favors will be given any consideration in county business affairs," Rader said.

Brands Defended

Rader defended George K. Brands Sr., former chief county assessor, who was fired by Quick and Lesoine last year for "insubordination."

Rader said Brands got into fights with Quick and Lesoine, the ruling majority, because he stuck by the Jacobs formulas for assessing land and buildings and objected to what Rader called "political changes in tax assessments."

Brands made assessment changes an election issue in November when he printed political advertisements in this newspaper revealing that the former board of commissioners had lowered the assessment on a Tannersville property owned by Lesoine himself.

Rader said tax appeals would not be heard by the commissioners before deputy county assessors had investigated the complaints to find if they are justified.

"If they find an error according to the county assessment manual and formula, we will correct it. If not, we will not change the assessment.

County Home

Rader's third item of business is improvement of administration at the county home at Kellersville.

"Strict records of all costs must by kept out there," Rader asserted. "Right now it's a bunch of nuts and bolts thrown in a basket," he added.

"We would like to have a profesional superintendent there because when the addition is finished it will be three times the present size. Mr. and Mrs. Haney, who are now in charge, are leaving in April."

Rader also said the commissioners would push construction of the addition as fast as possible.

Referring to criticism by Republican County Chairman Harold B. Kresge that the county is spending too much money on some people by sending them to the Carbon County home, Rader said there is no more space for the aged at the Monroe County home.

"It was built for 37 or 38 and there are 72 there now," Rader said. "That's why we want to get that addition up as fast as possible.

Airport Improvement

The Republican commissioner said the airport at Mt. Pocono "is just as essential to today's travel as it was it was to have a railroad station in East Stroudsburg on the D. L. and W. line."

"We need it, but it has got to be run right. They have done some things up there that a fifth grader wouldn't do. If they want county aid they have got to operate it better. We are going to see that we receive dollar for dollar value for any county aid they receive from here on in," Rader said.

In 1963, the county contributed $10,000 to the Mt. Pocono Airport Authority.

"We need a good airport for the Tobyhanna Army Depot, the resort business and the new Pocono Mountains International Raceway," Rader said.

Tomorrow: More Rader proposals.

Monroe Sportsmen To Act On Firearms Legislation

STROUDSBURG — James Price, president of the Monroe County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs, yesterday urged all federation members to acquaint themselves with the official stand the National Rifle Assn. is taking on firearms legislation.

Price said the club's position on this legislation will be discusstd and final action taken at the federation meeting Monday night in the Stroudsburg Municipal Building.

Price reported these statements from the rifle association official stand on anti-gun laws:

The NRA strongly supports legislation calling for severe mandatory punishment of persons convicted of a crime involving any weapon be it a knife, gun or other instrument.

The NRA supports the concept that the illegal use of firearms, and not the ownership of firearms for legitimate purposes, should be the subject of legislation. The rifle group says:

"Our citizens are not denied the right of assembly for fear that a riot will follow, nor are we forbidden to speak freely for fear that we may do harm in speaking.

"Why, then, should the right to "keep and bear arms" be denied law-abiding citizens for fear that a criminal may use a firearm illegally?

"Laws pertaining to concealed weapons are supported by the NRA. Only those citizens who have a definite need to carry concealed weapons should be licensed for this purpose.

"At the same time, the NRA opposes legislation requiring a citizen to fulfill the requirements for a concealed weapon in order to own a firearm or use it for legitimate purposes.

"The NRA has, and will, oppose the registration and licensing of all firearms. Such legislation does not prevent, or even deter, criminals from arming themselves, does not reduce crime.

"In fact, it only imposes an unnecessary bureaucratic burden on the law-abiding citizen. There are adequate laws on the books to enable police to trace firearms.

"The provisions of the Federal Firearms Act enabled the FBI to rapidly trace the rifle that was employed on the vile murder of President Kennedy. This, in spite of the fact that the rifle was obtained through fraud and deceit.

"Nothing in the present crisis has changed the fundamental policy of the NRA with respect to the purchase, possesion and use of firearms by law-abiding American citizens for lawful purposes."

Men still die with their boots on, with one foot on the accelerator.

A Useless Campaign

It is difficult to argue against enforcing the law, but recent efforts by the Pennsylvania sales tax bureau to enforce payment of the use tax on out-of-state purchases are useless.

A recent report from Harrisburg said efforts to force Pennsylvania shoppers in out-of-state shopping centers to pay the tax are costing the state more than they return in revenue.

Agents were sent into major shopping centers in New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Delaware and Maryland border communities.

George E. Gold, director of the Sales and Use Tax Bureau of the Department of Revenue, reported that 3,000 Pennsylvania shoppers in the area checked paid in $3,500.

That didn't cover the cost of sending agents after the delinquent taxpayers. The effort at enforcement proved a waste of money that was paid by taxpayers.

The state is also running advertisements in border newspapers, such as The Daily Record, urging citizens to pay the use tax on out-of-state purchases. Although the advertising revenue is welcome, we must confess that such advertising is not likely to be effective. It is a waste of taxpayers money.

While the total cost of this campaign has not been revealed, it is certainly much more than the new use tax revenue gained.

Under the law, Pennsylvania residents are morally and legally obligated to pay the use tax on out-of-state purchases either to the county treasurer or to an office of the Bureau of Sales and Use Tax.

The county treasurer is in the courthouse in Stroudsburg. The sales and use tax office is at 23 South 7th St. in Stroudsburg. The treasurer says he has not received any use taxes from private individuals. The sales tax office has received some, but not much.

So it appears that neither the voluntary nor the enforced method of collecting the tax on out-of-state purchases is working.

The only practical alternative appears to be an end to the expensive enforcement campaign with an appeal to public morality. There is no use in wasting more taxpayers money on a part of the law which cannot be enforced.

New Pesticide Law

The House Agriculture Committee has unanimously approved a bill to prevent the sale of pesticides before they are approved by the Agriculture Department.

Already passed by the Senate, the bill is a direct result of the best seller, "Silent Spring," written by Rachel Carson. The book explained in scientific detail the murderous effects of careless use of pesticides and the loopholes in federal regulation of pesticides.

Under present government regulation, a pesticide manufacturer may register his product "under protest" by the Agriculture Department and be allowed to sell it to the public although the government disapproves and is fighting the product in the courts — sometimes for years.

The new bill would simply forbid sale of the pesticide without government approval. The Agriculture Department would be required to approve or reject registration of the pesticide within 90 days.

It would also allow the manufacturer to display the government registration on the pesticide label, to assure the public that it has been approved.

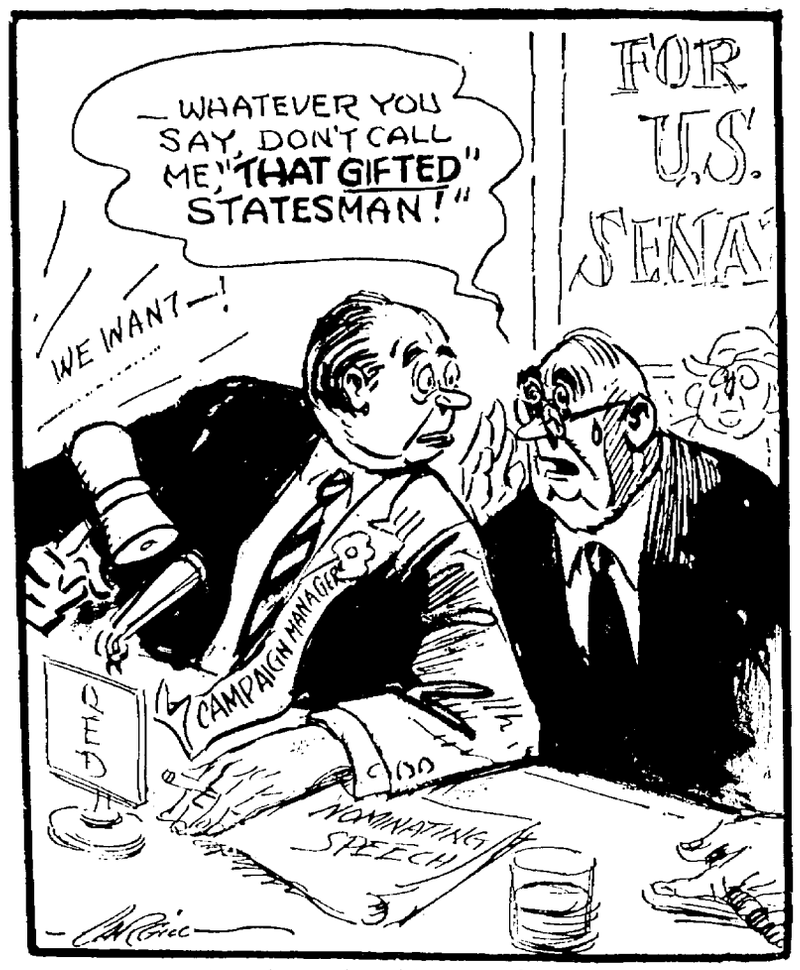
This corrective legislation is a small but important step in the direction of proper control of chemicals which the nation's farmers, gardeners and housewives need. It is fair to the manufacturer as well as the public, which needs protection from dangerous chemicals.

Comment Of The Day

"To put it in a nutshell, the wheeling and dealing has started, with the most accomplished wheeler and dealer Washington has ever seen, Lyndon B. Johnson, running for show.

"The New Dealers and Fair Dealers are only memories. Now we have the Wheeler-Dealers."

—William E. Miller, Republican national chairman, declaring election year war on the Kennedy-Johnson administration.



Sounding Political Keynote for 1964

The Pennsylvania Story

Ticket Probe Urged

By Mason Denison

HARRISBURG — Two members of the Legislature have formally requested the State Department of Justice to thoroughly investigate the Philadelphia traffic ticket racket disclosed statewide in detail by this column last week in a four-part series.

The probe has been requested by Cameron County Representative Erwin L. Murray and Greene County Representative Russell E. Headlee, the two lawmakers who initially sparked the four-part series by this column disclosing the suckering of upstate Pennsylvania motorists into paying traffic violation fines to the City of Philadelphia — when those accused hadn't even been in the city.

It was the information of complaining upstate residents furnished this column by lawmakers Murray and Headlee that led to the first disclosure in mid-December, to be followed up in detail in last week's four-part series.

In the interim, from mid-December to the present, both lawmakers and this column have been flooded (figuratively and literally!) with "testimony" from all sections of the state by victims caught in the Philadelphia traffic ticket racket.

In their joint letter to Attorney General Walter W. Alessandroni requesting the full-scale probe by the Department of Justice, Representatives Murray and Headlee said:

"In all probability you have by now become acquainted with the four-part series of "Pennsylvania Story" columns written last week by Mason Denison, whose syndicated daily column appears statewide, calling attention to the obvious injustice and seeming fraud on the part of Philadelphia in the issuance of traffic violation citations against residents of this State who were not in Philadelphia at the time of the alleged violation. In case you are not familiar with this series, clippings are enclosed for your review.

"The evidence upon which Mr. Denison has based his series appears quite sound. The volume of the evidence clearly indicates that there can be no excuse of "isolated instances" or "human error", which most certainly is under such is not the case in the standable occasionally. That present instance is clearly and conclusively evident, or at least so it would seem.

"There has to be a "reason" for this now obviously widespread injustice being foisted upon the citizens of Pennsylvania; in fact it seemingly can be called little other than a cruel injustice.

"Mr. Denison in his syndicated column has recommended that the Department of Justice thoroughly investigate this injustice; determine why it exists; who or what is behind it; who is responsible; the prosecution thereof if warranted, and the insurance that such injustice on the people of Pennsylvania be halted forthwith — with proper steps taken, through legislation if necessary, to prevent its recurrence.

"As elected Representatives pledged to safeguard the interests of the citizens of Pennsylvania, we join with Mr. Denison in requesting that your Department initiate immediately a thorough investigation of the Philadelphia traffic ticket injustice to which Mr. Denison refers in his four-part series. He has assured that the material in his possession will be available to you."

Robert S. Allen

The Allen-Scott Report

'Soft Loan' Unit

Paul Scott

WASHINGTON — The chances are 100 to 1 you aren't aware of it, but a big chunk of foreign aid spending already has been voted by the Senate.

While Congress (after some six weeks) is still awaiting the recommendations of President Johnson's special interdepartmental committee to "reorganize" the widely-assailed foreign aid program, the administration has rammed through the Senate a $312 million foreign aid bill.

This approximately one-third of a billion dollars is in addition to the $3.4 billion the President listed for economic and military foreign aid in his budget message last week.

The $312 million is to increase this country's share of the funds of the Independent Development Association — a "soft loan" agency of the World Bank.

Established in 1960 with a $1 billion fund, of which the U. S. put up $320 million and other World Bank members $423 million, IDA so far has loaned $554 million--most of it ($300 million) to India. The new money is to increase IDA's funds by $750 million, with other nations contributing $438 million.

Avowed purpose of IDA is to help so-called "undeveloped" countries. It makes 50-year interest-free loans, with a ¾ of one per cent annual service charge. (It costs the U. S. Treasury around 4 per cent to borrow money). But virtually all IDA borrowers already are receiving large amounts of U. S. economic and military aid, as follows: Pakistan, Turkey, South Korea, Formosa, Jordan, Chile, Colombia, Haiti, Ethiopia, Sudan, Tunisia.

All these countries, including India, are in arrears on United Nations assessments. As of December 31, 1963, they owed more than $16 million.

A bipartisan group of senators made a determined fight to hold up action on the $312 million bill on the ground it should be considered as part of the whole foreign aid program.

"What's the rush and why the hurry?" demanded Senator Wayne Morse, D-Ore. "We ought to stop and take a longer look. We should not pass this bill until we make our decision later this year on the whole foreign assistance program. We should look at it as a total package, and not segmentize it in this way. This is a serious mistake, because not a single senator, including the majority leader, knows what the administration's program for foreign aid is."

Steamrolling the Opposition —Senator Morse's motion to send the measure back to the Foreign Relations Committee was defeated 37 to 33—a significantly close margin that bodes ill for the President's proposed $3.4 billion foreign aid budget.

While the administration's steamroller was able to ram the $312 million bill through the Senate, the outlook for the big appropriation is not promising. The President has his work cut out for him getting it through the House and Senate unscathed.

On the basis of this Senate clash, the odds are against him.

An important factor in this portentous battle was the bipartisan complexion of the opposition.

Foremost among those waging this struggle were Senators Morse, Frank Lausche, D-O., Bourke Hickenlooper, R-Ia., Stuart Symington, D-Mo., Allen Ellender, D-La., and Jack Miller, R-Iowa.

Administration spokesmen were Senators J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Mike Monroney, D-Okla.

In rallying the surprisingly close vote against the administration's bill, the opposition made five major points, as follows:

Senator Lausche: "IDA is completely free from any conditions or restrictions contained in the ((regular) foreign aid program. . . . On the one hand, we created conditions supposedly in the interest of the United States in the administering of foreign aid, and on the other hand, we are giving a free rein to IDA."

Senator Hickenlooper: "This bill would permit IDA to do more lending to countries for purposes which Congress either has not authorized, or which Congress has specifically prohibited—for example the giant steel mill in India."

Senator Symington: "The World Bank has accumulated $813 million in reserves, and this is being augmented every year by more than $100 million. Are we to make additional appropriations to the World Bank for its 'soft window,' which is in fact what we are asked to do through IDA, when this Bank already has ample reserves to take care of expected 'soft loan' commitments for the next three-year period. Why do we have to continue with such a heavy surplus in the World Bank, while at the same time adding to this "soft loan' set up? The directors, the officers, and the entire structure are the same for both the World Bank and the IDA."

Dear Abby

Betwixt And Between!

DEAR ABBY: I can't eat anything that has garlic in it. It makes me violently ill. Over the years I have been invited frequently to dine at the home of a long-time friend. She knows I can't eat anything with garlic in it, but every time I am there she has garlic in practically everything. When she sees me take a whiff and then pass something up, she says, "Oh, I forgot!" The last time this happened I lost my temper and replied, "After 22 years?" She then said, "I can't cook a special meal for you. Besides, everyone else seems to like my cooking." I don't want to end my friendship with her because she entertains nicely and has some very interesting guests (artists and musicians). So how should I handle this problem in the future?

HATES GARLIC, LIKES PARTIES

DEAR HATES: Your friend obviously doesn't care to go to extra trouble for you. Either decline her dinner invitations and accept for "later," or ask permission to bring a box lunch.

DEAR ABBY: I read in the paper where a man in California said that women who wore slacks on the street should be fined. You tell him to go jump in the lake! Women don't look any worse in slacks than men look in Bermuda shorts. Some have knobby knees, and other are bow-legged and as hairy as apes. I am a 59-year-old woman with arthritis, and my doctor told me to keep my legs warm, so I wear slacks every chance I get. And anybody who doesn't like it doesn't have to look. Sign me—

WARM AND COMFY

DEAR WARM: I am sure that there is no objection to "slacks" that are properly tailored. The man who complained may have been referring to those "stretch pants" that look as though they had been put on with a spray gun.

DEAR ABBY: If men are really not more important in the sight of God, why then in all Biblical references is the MAN always mentioned first when speaking of father and mother?

BIBLE STUDENT

DEAR STUDENT: This is not true. Although the Ten Commandments say, "Honor thy FATHER and mother," in Leviticus, Chapter XIX, Verse 3, it enjoins every man to fear (revere) his MOTHER and his father.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "DAIRY FARMER IN WISCONSIN:" She sounds like a milker. Butter up the udder one.

Get it off your chest. For a personal unpublished reply, write to ABBY, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Walter Lippmann

Convulsion In GOP

By Walter Lippmann

While no one can suppose that the polls measuring President Johnson's popularity predict exactly what is going to happen next November, they do say that as of now the Republican Party is in very bad shape indeed.

When one remembers that a candidate who gets 60% of the votes on election day wins by a large landslide in the Electoral College, these current figures rating President Johnson at 75 or even 80% seem to say there is some kind of convulsion within the Republican Party. For while President Johnson will almost certainly not get the votes of all the people who are for him now, I believe the polls are telling an important story.

It turns on the argument about me-tooism among Republicans, as illustrated by Goldwater and Rockefeller.

Senator Goldwater is saying that the Republican Party can win only if it offers the voters "a choice and not an echo." His theory is that the Republicans must differ radically from the Democrats.

Governor Rockefeller, on the other hand, not only agrees with the main aims of the Democrats, but knows that a large majority of the people agree with them, also. So he is driven to take the position that the Republican Party with him as leader would achieve the common aims better than the Democrats can achieve them. This is what Senator Goldwater calls me-tooism, in his mind a recipe for defeat.

If we take a close look at me-tooism, we have to ask ourselves whether, in fact, the kind of radically different alternative exists which Senator Goldwater talks about. No Republican Presidential candidate since the Roosevelt landslide of the 1930s has thought that there was such an alternative. Willkie, Dewey, Eisenhower and Nixon all practiced what Goldwater calls me-too-ism.

Why? Not because they did not wish to win. Not because they did not wish to offer the voters a choice between themselves and the Democratic candidates. They practiced me-tooism because in a nation-wide election there was no choice.

The Democratic Party under Franklin Roosevelt, Truman, Stevenson and Kennedy has pre-empted and occupied all the central positions in national and international policy. There are no other national positions to be occupied. The fact that this is so is being demonstrated by the complete failure of Senator Goldwater himself to produce any kind of coherent and defensible program.

Historically, the present plight of the Republican Party dates from the split in 1912 between the Progressive Nationalists, who were for Theodore Roosevelt, and the Parochial Stand-Patters, who were for William Howard Taft. Only twice in the half-century since that schism has the Republican Party been returned to power. But both times it was after a great war, in the backwash of the excitements and the sacrifices, when the people were war-weary and angry at the disappointing peace which followed the war.

Neither in the 1920s under Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, nor in the 1950s under Eisenhower did the Republican Party return to power with a radically different policy. Herbert Hoover, though he chose to be a Republican, was in international affairs a Wilsonian Democrat. And Dwight D. Eisenhower, when he finally decided to be a Republican, had nevertheless made his career and acquired his views of policy under Roosevelt and Truman.

The me-tooism of the national Republicans is the consequence of the historic fact that in the split of 1912 the Parochial Stand-Patters ousted the Progressive Nationalists from the control of the party organization. This is still the condition of the party.

That is why in Congress the Republican Party based on local organizations is predominantly parochial and stand-pat and why, when the national election comes along, the candidate who expects to win has no choice but some kind of me-tooism. For with the party split in 1912, it surrendered to the Democrats the initiative in the selection and formulation of issues in domestic and international affairs. By surrendering the initiative, the party organization surrendered the vital center of American politics to the Democrats.

Hoffa In Trouble

By RICHARD SPONG
Editorial Research Reports

WASHINGTON—Fresh from victory in what may prove one of the most historic labor-management settlements ever, James Riddle Hoffa returned to familiar courtroom surroundings Monday when he went on trial in Chattoanooga, with six alleged associates, charged with jury tampering.

The Teamsters Union boss and his co-defendants already had received a postponement and a change in venue.

The present jury tampering charges stem from a trial in which Hoffa was accused of conspiring to violate the Taft-Hartley Act by taking an alleged $1 million kickback from a trucking firm. The case ended in a mistrial when the jury failed to reach a verdict.

An alleged $10,000 offer was made to influence a juror in that trial in November, 1962. Two of Hoffa's attorneys were recently disbarred from federal court practice for involvement in the alleged fix.

Long Arrest Record

Hoffa, who used to boast, "I got a list of arrests maybe as long as your arm," has the best legal talent Teamster money can buy. He has proved an extremely capable defendant in previous cases.

For example, in July 1957, he was acquitted of a charge of bribery after former heavyweight champion Joe Louis shook his hand and sat with him in front of a jury which contained eight Negro members. Hoffa and seven associates are still under federal charges of fraudulently obtaining $20 million in loans from the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. They are accused also of personally benefiting by more than $1 million from these loans.

Labor Empire

The new court trial comes at a time when Hoffa's grand labor design is cresting. The Teamsters and 1,000 big trucking companies on Jan. 16 got together on contracts which, while bringing the union members hourly wage 28 cents and fringe 17 cents benefits over a three-year period, more importantly all have a common expiration date—March 31, 1967.

Now Hoffa will use this agreement as the basis for negotiating a similar settlement with 15,000 smaller truckers.

This would fit in with a scheme that Hoffa has nurtured for more than half a dozen years—his dream of a vast "conference" or confederation of all transport unions, sea, land, and air.

Robert F. Kennedy, when he was chief counsel of the Senate Rackets Committee, described this vision as threatening an "unholy alliance that could dominate the U. S. within three to five years."

Club News

The Monroe Stamp Club takes this opportunity to express its congratulations to all the winners in the various divisions of the stamp exhibit, and to all who entered.

This year's exhibit was the best we have ever held, not only for the exhibits, but for the mechanics, and all the detail work that has to be done prior to the exhibit. This excellent "pre-exhibit" work was handled with careful detail by the chairman, John Possinger and the club extends to him their thanks and congratulations on a job well done.

Also we are very grateful to the manager, Mr. Rockwell, and to Newberry's for permitting us to hold the exhibit in their store—many thanks. To all those who assisted John in his difficult job of arrangement, publicity, and judging we extend our thanks.

The club will meet Wednesday, Feb. 5, 8 p.m., at which time a sound movie will be shown through the courtesy of the United States Post Office. All are welcome.

Speaking Of Your Health:

World Battles Starvation

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Two-thirds of all human beings in the world suffer from outright hunger and starvation every day of their lives.

One of the major targets of scientists, physicians, sociologists and agriculturalists is the problem of malnutrition that exists everywhere.

It is strange and sadly paradoxical that malnutrition should be so prevalent in the presence of the magnificent strides in medicine that have been made since the turn of the century.

These accomplishments are responsible for a marked reduction in infancy and childhood deaths. Control of infection with antibiotics and new surgical technique for heart disease and cancer contribute, too, to an increased life span.

Focus On Nutrition

An expanding population brings into immediate focus the need for supplying adequate nutrition to the many millions given the additional years of life.

Dr. Frederick J. Stare of Harvard University, an internationally famous expert on nutrition, states: "Nutritional diseases are responsible for more than half of all deaths in children two to five years of age in many parts of the world. Yet they are completely preventable. Milk will prevent and treat these diseases. So will mixtures of certain cereals and various legumes (peas, beans, and other vegetables)."

Closely Related

According to Dr. Stare: "Nutritional deficiencies are closely related to the population explosion. The tragedy of it is that the population increases are most dramatically noted in areas of the world where food productivity is still extremely limited."

The Third National Conference on World Health concentrated its attention on the massive problem of international malnutrition. Health agencies and public health officials of almost every country encouraged the formation of the conference in Washington and took part in its discussions.

It is imperative that international research discover means of increasing the production of proteins — meat, milk, and food supplements — so that unnecessary illness and death from starvation will be eliminated.

Problem's Solution

Educational programs to change dietary habits, new means of distributing foods and soliciting community interest in the problem can, with time and effort, eradicate starvation.

Many technological advances can be used to increase this food production.

Center's Purpose

Congressman John E. Fogarty (Dem.-R.I.) said:

"The center would be associated with the National Institutes of Health and would represent the visible and tangible embodiment of the nation's devotion to the use of science for peaceful purpose and the good of mankind."

An era that boasts of flights toward the moon, nuclear fission and supersonic international travel must not be identified with poverty, ignorance, and starvation.

Markin Time

Lord, help me keep the distant view.
Each day, my former self excel.
And may I always want to be
A little more than fairly well.

Stories Behind Words

by William S. Penfield

Kill With Kindness

Draco was an Athenian legislator who, in 621 B.C., drew up a code of laws that by later standards was extremely cruel.

Although he and his laws have been severely criticized through the centuries, Draco was a popular man in his time.

It was a custom in Greece for an audience to applaud by standing and waving caps and cloaks. Great applause was expressed by tossing the caps and cloaks at the person being applauded.

It is said that Draco was smothered to death in a theater in Aegina when an enthusiastic audience threw caps and cloaks on him.

The legend is the basis for the phrase, "to kill with kindness."

$1,214,931 E-burg Budget Open To Public Viewing

By GIL MURRAY
Daily Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — A proposed 1964 budget for the Borough of East Stroudsburg totaling $1,214,931.78 is now open to the public in the borough manager's office in the municipal building on S. Courtland St.

If past apathy among East Stroudsburg taxpayers prevails, one or two people will stop and take a detailed look at the way East Stroudsburg's elected officials plan to spend more than one million dollars.

Sterling Cramer, borough manager, said in the past 10 years only 10 or 12 persons have come to the municipal building to inspect a tentative budget.

Even though the proposed budget includes $343,000 — the borough's share of a proposed water filtration plant — no tax increase is anticipated to raise the necessary revenues.

The borough's real estate taxes for general fund use will remain at 17 mills or $17 for every $1,000 of assessed valuation. The anticipated general fund revenue is $180,536.64.

Two mills of this total will go toward the sinking fund—which is required to pay the principal and interest on the borough's bonded debt. The 1964 sinking fund will spend $16,841.86.

Despite the fact a new water plant is scheduled for completion next year, water rents will remain the same. The minimum water rate is $22 per year — for a home with a kitchen sink and a full bathroom.

The council has budgeted $734,125 for the water fund in 1964.

The sewer fund with 2,000 customers will spend a proposed $352,470.38, according to the budget. Minimum sewer rental in East Stroudsburg is $60 per year.

The highway fund, financed by grants from the state motor vehicle license fund, will spend $16,841.86.

General fund revenues will include $93,300 from real estate taxes; $10,000 from a $5 per capita tax; $8,800 from a 19 mill tax on occupation assessments.

The occupations tax is based $60 for a house wife to $1,000 for some professions.

Also $17,200 from parking meter fines and money from violations of ordinances and statutes.

Biggest In General Fund

The big 1964 expenditures in the general fund will be $39,000 for the police department, which includes six men plus the chief and assistant chief; $17,000 for garbage collection, and $14,000 for street lighting.

The highway fund will spend $7,782.51 on street maintenance and repair; $4,000 for snow removal, and $3,559.35 for materials and supplies.

The big item in the water fund budget is the $687,000 itemized for the new water plant and intake. This will be financed by $343,000 in matching amounts from the federal government and the borough.

Other water fund revenues are $77,000 from water sales plus a starting bank balance of $27,614.62.

The sewer fund revenue will include $175,000 from sewer rentals and $87,470.38 as of Jan. 1, 1964. The big expenditure will be $232,000 for interest and principal on the sewage disposal plant bond issue.

The sinking fund will realize $12,000 from real estate taxes and will spend $11,000 on bond issue principal and $2,665.24 on bond interest.

In other action the board:

Approved the preliminary plans of Ehrlichs Market on Washington St. for off street parking.

At Barrett School Center

Partial Lab Tests Show No Water Contamination

CRESCO — Officials of the Pocono Mountain Joint School System said last night that partial results of laboratory tests run on new samples of water taken from the Barrett Elementary Center in Cresco show no contamination.

The Pocono Bioligical Laboratory reported to Pocono Mountain school officials on Monday that a sample of water taken for testing purposes last week was found to contain mild contamination.

Since that time all water at the center has been boiled before children were allowed to drink it.

Last night Dr. Edmund Magann, president of the Pocono Mountain Joint School Committee, said new samples taken from various places in the Barrett school show no contamination after preliminary and inconclusive testing.

To Be Known Today

He said conclusive results of testing will be known sometime today and that Arthur Slee, owner of the Pocono laboratory, indicated he thought the water would be free of contamination.

William Shoemaker, Monroe County sanitarian, said yesterday that he has taken samples from Cresco and has sent them to the State Health Department's laboratory in Philadelphia. He expects the results sometime today.

Allows Leeway

Shoemaker said the U.S. Public Health standards used by the state health department allow for an occasional bad sample of water.

He said that one bad sample would not indicate that water coming from the Mountainhome Water Co., the supplier, is necessarily contaminated.

He said results of samples taken after the initial contamination will indicate whether or not there is cause for alarm.

Dr. Magann said the bad sample was discovered by Slee, who was taking routine test of water at all schools in the Pocono Mountain system.

He said Pocono Mountain has a contract with Slee to test water and cafeteria facilities at all schools once a month.

Mt. Bethel Youth Jailed In Default Of $2,500 Bail

PORTLAND--Russell William Hoagland, 18, of Mt. Bethel, was committed Tuesday to Northampton County jail in default of $2,500 bail.

He is charged with two burglary counts and one larceny count.

It is alleged that Hoagland broke into Besecker's Diner on the night of Jan. 25, and into Dahlman's Service Station on the night of Oct. 28, 1963. Both businesses are in Portland.

Loot taken from each place was estimated at $40.

Hoagland was arraigned before Easton Alderman David T. Reibman. He was arrested by State Trooper Charles Malasnik of the Easton State Police substation and Jess Felker, Portland chief of police.

Bangor Sewer Authority Adopts Budget

BANGOR — Bangor Sewage Authority this week adopted the administrative budget for the year.

In other business all officers were re-elected at a meeting held in the Town Hall.

Re-elected were Ray Young, chairman; Louis J. Trigiani, vice chairman; Millard Gleim, secretary; Clarence Beegle, treasurer; John D. Hamm Jr., assistant secretary and treasurer, and J. Lawrence Davis, solicitor.

Mast Engineering Co. was retained as consultants. The authority also decided to inspect the treatment plant facilities and make improvements where necessary.

Members of St. John's Reformed Cemetery Association were present when the front foot assessment on the cemetery was reviewed.

The officers salary stipulations were set the same as last year.

Daniel Phillips, new chairman of the sewage committee of Bangor Borough council, was present at the meeting.

Area Men Elected To Health Board

PHILADELPHIA — Two Monroe County men were elected directors of Pennsylvania Mental Health, Inc. at the organization's annual meeting in Philadelphia.

The new directors are Harold B. Crosdale of Delaware Water Gap, and James Gould of Effort.

The organization is a statewide mental health association.

Elected as the organization's new president was Frederick D. Justin of Perkiomenville. Edward M. Green of Harrisburg was elected vice president.

E-L Rails Reports Deficit

NEW YORK — The Erie Lackawanna reported yesterday a deficit of $17,115,272 for the year 1963 on gross operating revenues of $206,003,095. This compares with a deficit of $18,608,069 in 1962, when revenues totaled $210,945,958.

Operating expenses were $180,840,870 in 1963 and $185,895,877 in 1962.

In commenting on the results, William White, who was elected chairman and chief executive officer at midyear, said that the road is going through a rebuilding process and has to spend money to improve its service, equipment and track.

"It is unrealistic to think that the deficits that have been plaguing the Erie Lackawanna for the past several years can be wiped out in one stroke," Mr. White said. "This is a painstakingly slow process but we are laying the groundwork for the years ahead. We are hopeful about the prospects for increasing revenues and futher reducing expenses. We want to have profitable operations in 1965. That is our goal."

Four Model At Fashion Show

Fashions for the style show were designed and created by Mrs. Jeanne Borbidge, a fourth-generation tailor and dressmaker whose home is in South Sterling.

Red Front Unit Gets Estate

ERIE, Pa. (UPI) — Judge James B. Dwyer ruled Tuesday that an alleged Communist-front organization is entitled to a bequest left by an Erie woman.

Judge Dwyer ordered that $1,250, the remainder of a bequest by the late Mrs. Jessie W. Armstrong, be turned over to the National Council of American - Soviet Friendship Inc.

Mrs. Armstrong died in 1956, leaving $1,412 to the council, which is on the attorney general's list of subversive organizations.

Just Between Us — —

—By Bobby Westbrook

Just as everybody can talk about the weather, so everybody in his own way is an authority on child-rearing. Just as it rains on the just and the unjust, we were all once children, and, in our own minds at least, shining examples of how it should be done.

Although I must say there was nothing of the holier-than-thou attitude about the Linda Pipher's panel discussing the problems of youth the other night. In fact there was certain amount of "where we have failed" listing of the sins of omission, their own as well as those of others.

The only trouble is that neither the panel nor the audience which joined in the discussion afterward can be considered, by any human standards at least, to have done any such thing. Failed at bringing up their children, I mean.

Where we have failed, all of us, is that we never seem to reach the people who might need help most. Who turns out for the PTA meeting on juvenile delinquency? The parent worrying about getting his children into college not the one worrying about keeping them out of jail.

It is salutary to point out to parents that they shouldn't just send their child to Sunday school but come right along with him, but what about the parent who never even thought of it, who wouldn't have the clothes to put on him or know how to go about it if she did think of it?

It is just to place the responsibility squarely on the home. But what if the home just can't cope because their parents never learned from their parents and on back?

It is frustrating and heartbreaking to people of good will, but maybe good will isn't enough. The panel had sound opinions, well expressed. The discusison was stimulating. But one of the chief values of the panel was never expressed in words at all.

That was the fact that the panel itself, individually, has been practicing what it was preaching. That each of them in his own way, has gone beyond his care and concern for his own family to do something, actively and personally, for those other children. They couldn't say it. But I can.

Count on medium-size onions baked in a covered casserole taking at least an hour in a moderate oven. You can add a little stock to the bottom of the baking dish and dot the onions with butter or margarine. Salt, pepper and paprika will make a trio of good seasonings.

Fish Prices Reasonable For Lenten Dishes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A variety of meats will be featured this weekend by supermarkets and neighborhood stores for cold-weather eating.

Specials include beef roasts, ground beef, steaks, pork chops, loin roasts and bacon.

Chicken fryers and broilers are featured at attractive prices in most areas.

The outlook is good for reasonably priced fish for Lenten menus. The demand for fish remains lower because of last year's botulism scare.

Egg prices are down two to four cents from last week.

Excellent vegetable buys include brussels sprouts, carrots, celery, sweet potatoes and potatoes.

Apples, avacados, grapefruit and oranges are the most abundant fruits. Pecans and other nuts are in good supply.

THE WYCKOFF SHOPPER

'ROUND AND ABOUT WYCKOFF'S —

If all the Wyckoff employees seem to be gaining weight, you can credit Tommy Rinehart. Tommy found a good buy on cup cakes the other day and a huge box of them was delivered to the store for all of us to share. He does this frequently, with his treats ranging from fruit to sweets . . . On the other hand, if it's a Tearoom waitress who is adding pounds, Blanche Mackey may be to blame. It is nothing for Blanche to come in with a "coffee break surprise" that might be Brownies, cinnamon buns, or cheesecake—such cheesecake as would put Lindy's and Max Asna's Delicatessen to shame! The way I figure it, Blanche feels that plump waitresses are a good advertisement for the excellent quality of her food, but she herself can eat and EAT, without gaining an ounce.

It is grand to see Annie Williams back at her station in the Tearoom, following her recent bereavement, and doesn't she look well with her hair so short? Ann says she is deeply grateful to all of our many customers, and to her co-workers, for helping her through the recent "bad days."

* * *

A casual totaling of sales shows that the Keystone Room, where our 27th annual Art Show continues through this Saturday, has done $903.00 worth of business. As one gentleman said, "At these prices, why wouldn't you sell? Nine-tenths of the pictures are considerably under-priced."

He is undoubtedly right . . . yet the fact remains that a few years ago, only a comparatively few people would consider investing in an oil painting at any price. They would reject a 25.00 painting that was technically excellent, in favor of a bad reproduction at ten dollars or so. This is no longer true. Men, women, and children of this area are increasingly art conscious, and there are art collectors at all financial levels who delight in discovering and acquiring the work of local artists. This is due in large measure to the increasing national attention to the arts so pronounced during the time the late President Kennedy and Mrs. Kennedy occupied the White House, and also to the attention being given the arts in this area through the efforts of both the Pocono Art Center and the Pocono Mountain Art Group. Certainly, we have never had a show at Wyckoff's that aroused so much sincere interest. Oddly enough, however, we still hear an occasional comment that "the show is grand, but the prices are outlandishly high."

In his "visit" with me on the air Tuesday morning, Bill Wells was talking about the World's Fair trips planned by our Wyckoff Travel Bureau at a cost of 8.25 for adults and 7.25 for children. This includes the round trip fare and the admission to the Fair itself.

Later, our telephone rang and Violet Clark Eddy called attention to the February 11th issue of Look Magazine, being sold at Wyckoff's, which contains a 36-page World Fair guide, as well as a marvelous story of the Fair and its attractions. Edna suggests people save this to take with them on their Wyckoff excursion.

She also tells me we are planning an excursion to the Philadelphia Flower Show March 10th. Further particulars later.

Olympic Circus

INNSBRUCK, Austria, Jan. 27—You begin by trying to picture the setting for this peculiar circus called the "Olympieshe Winterspiele 1964" and you find yourself in the capital of Tyrol, an easy-going community of 100,000 flanked by mountains of more than ordinary beauty.

It wasn't far from here that Hannibal and his elephants once passed. They were doing a split week at Brenner, having followed Eddie Fisher at the Palace Theater in Patscherkofel.

In the cavalcade of transportation, it is to be noted that over the same ground traversed by Hannibal on elephants, your correspondent has come in a rented Volkswagen, a noble mechanism which is a driver's answer to the space capsule.

Some 10 miles to the west of Innsbruck lies Seefeld where Nordic events in the Winter Olympics are to be contested. Twelve miles to the southwest is Lizum, site of Alpine skiing, and 8 miles to the south is Igls where bobsledders and tobogganers will be romping.

The jumpers will operate out of Bergisel, a suburb of Innsbruck and most of everything else will take place in the new indoor rink in the middle of the city.

And so you have a general picture of activities in this winter paradise which at the moment has everything except an inconsequential commodity called snow.

Actually a healthy snowfall hasn't occurred around here in two months. The mountains bear only scattered patches of the stuff and a thin layer covers some of the flatland, but otherwise they may as well be staging the Winter Olympics in Palm Springs.

The Austrian Army has made transplantations of snow to prepare ski courses and everything will proceed on schedule, but it is the least bit embarrassing to sponsors to find people picking up a suntan in the Tyrols in late January.

Inevitably another snowfall must come or visitors here will next be playing golf.

Still, no one is complaining, including the American Broadcasting Company which has purchased television rights for a half million and whose cameras hope to avoid those parts of the landscape bereft of snow.

The Luftwaffe of the ABC controls the skies over Innsbruck. It has engaged five helicopters for transporting its troops and for shooting films of some of the ski events.

In the coziness of their nests, television viewers in America will be watching the games, assuming of course that everything proceeds by pinpoint precision mapped out by the network.

It is entirely possible that General Eisenhower's staff had a plan less complicated for the invasion of the Normandy Coast. ABC has leased wires to Frankfurt, Germany, some 240 miles away, and will transmit its tape there each day about noon.

The stuff will then be placed aboard a jet heading for New York. It should arrive by 4 in time for final editing and showing that night.

Should Frankfurt be socked in by weather, which is always 6-5 pick it in winter, ABC has an alternate plan whereby a European network, which is transmitting daily from Innsbruck to Paris, will ship its material to New York by jet.

You get an insight into the complications attendant to working in a mixed-up affair such as this by listening to the distressing story of an ABC executive who spent two hours explaining details to an Austrian coordinator.

"Do you remember what I'm trying to say?" the ABC guy asked.

"Perfectly," replied the Austrian rising from his seat. "And now the hour is late and I bid you hello."

Innsbruck is an old city whose history dates back more than a thousand years. It points with pride to its cultural program and is trying to expose unpolished types such as sportswriters to events like a Haydn concert, featuring a bassoon virtuoso, and an evening of Mozart.

Actually the field for learning is wide open in all respects for most foreign journalists, who come here knowing as much about bassoons as they do about the giant slalom.

The overall spectacle, however, is colorful. The streets of Innsbruck are festooned with lights that give the place a Christmas flavor. Steins of rich lager are sliding down the bar, and the number of visitors by the weekend should inflate the normal population here by double.

As this is written, the sun is shining brightly and the boys outside are riding their bicycles. If new snow doesn't come soon they may be holding trials here this week for the pole vault and men's and ladies' swimming.

CHEYNEY — The Wolverines of Cheyney, controlling the boards on superior height advantage, walloped East Stroudsburg State College last night, 91-77.

Sam Rines ripped the nets for 25 pints on 11 field goals and three foul shots to lead both teams in scoring.

The defeat was the sixth in seven starts for the Warriors in the Pennsylvania State Colleges Athletic Conference. Cheyney picked up its second win in seven conference outings.

Five of the Wolverines hit in double figures. Following Rines were Tom Washington and Roland Coleman, each with 14; Whelton Miller with 11, and Charley Grantham, 10.

Miller grabbed 15 rebounds for the winners, while Washington, a 6-7 incoming freshman, picked off 10. In all, Cheyney out-rebounded ESSC by a 69-28 margin.

Harvey Branyan and Dick Koch each netted 14 for the Warriors. Duane Ely followed with 13 and Guy Stewart pumped in 12.

ESSC Wrestlers Notch 8th Straight

EAST STROUDSBURG — Coach Red Witman's East Stroudsburg State College wrestlers remained undefeated last night, chalking up their eighth straight win of the season over visiting Millersville, 26-7.

Jan Dutt of the Warriors notched his eighth win—most on the team—with a 6-0 verdict over Gary Jones in the 123-pound class.

Also remaining unbeaten for the ESSC grapplers were Bob Guzzo (6-0), Fred Peruzzi (4-0), Bud Lawrence (5-0-2), Chet Dalgewicz (7-0-1), Roy Miller (7-0), and Dick Bell (7-0-1).

It was the first match which Dalgewicz failed to win this season. Jerry Kenderdine, runner-up in the state college championships last year, held the ESSC flash to a 2-2 draw.

Second Draw

Lawrence also has held to his second tie of the season as he and Millersville's Jerry Herr battled to a 7-7 stalemate. Herr is a former Pennsylvania state high school champ.

Guzzo decisioned Dave Essig, who had the best record for Millersville (6-1), by a 9-4 count in the 130-pound bout.

Bell and Miller scored the only pins for East Stroudsburg. The results:

123—Jan Dutt (ES) dec. Gary Jones, 6-0.
130—Bob Guzzo (ES) dec. Dave Essig, 9-4.
137—Fred Peruzzi (ES) dec. Hal Shenk, 9-2.

AFL Grabs TV For $36 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Football League, bargaining into a stronger competitive position with the rival National League, grabbed a $36 million television package with both hands Wednesday and said it will start exploring expansion possibilities immediately.

The five-year contract with the National Broadcasting Co. becomes effective with the 1965 season, after the present AFL pact with the American Broadcasting Co. expires.

"This is another step forward for the American Football League which has improved its position yearly since its formation in 1960," said Commissioner Joe Foss.

Similar To NFL

The AFL contract is comparable to the $28.2-million, two-year agreement signed by the National Football League with the Columbia Broadcasting System last Friday.

The NFL pact breaks down to slightly more than $1 million a year for each of its 14 teams. Each of the eight AFL clubs will receive approximately $900,000 a year from NBC.

"It's a great thing for the prestige of the league and the greatest day in our history," said Billy Sullivan, president of the AFL and the Boston Patriots. "We haven't signed as many draft choices this year as in the past and this will allow our owners to be in a stronger position from now on."

An AFL spokesman said that the National League has signed or has commitments from 61 and the AFL 53 of the players drafted by the American League in 1963.

New Franchises?

Foss disclosed that at least a dozen groups have applied for franchises.

"I'm sure that this will be increased soon," he said. "We have received applications from four groups in Philadelphia, also others from Chicago, Los Angeles, Cincinnati, Columbus, Montreal, Atlanta and Portland, Ore.

"I don't know how far away expansion is, maybe three of four years, but now we can really start thinking about it. This contract puts all of our present clubs in the black."

$1 Million Guarantee

The NBC payment to the American League will be on a graduated scale over the five years and the AFL said it will guarantee each club approximately $1 million for 1969, the last year of the contract.

The new contract does not cover the league's championship playoff game nor the All-Star game. Provision is also made for AFL expansion, guaranteeing additional television revenue to any new clubs.

The ABC Network has a holdover contract for 1964 which will pay $2.35 million for the rights to the AFL championship game with the AFL, Rozelle said, "We have no such plans."

Bill MacPhail, Columbia Broadcasting System vice president who landed the new NFL contract Friday for a two-year bid of $28.2 million, expressed surprise at the latest development.

"This is a tremendous tribute to professional football as the No. 1 spectator sport," said a club owner who did not wish to be identified. "The new contract gives the other league substance. It makes them big league."

Here To Stay

A representative of another club commented that the new five-year deal indicated that the AFL was in the field to stay.

Ordell Braase of the Baltimore Colts, president of the NFL Players Association, attended Wednesday's league meeting with Pete Retzlaff of Philadelphia and Bernie Parrish of Cleveland.

It was the first time the players had presented their proposals directly to the owners at a league meeting.

Modest Proposals

The proposals were modest. Braase asked a pay increase to $100 a man for the pre-season exhibition games. The players have been getting $50 since 1958.

Braase also asked for player representation on the pension committee which now is composed of Rozelle and two disinterested persons who have no connection with the league.

The players and Creighton Miller, their lawyer, emphasized the association was interested primarily in such matters as the pension fund. They said player contract negotiations should be left to the individual.

Dennis was rolling for the L & B Appliance team of the Commercial "B" League.

Palmer Falls Early At Palm Springs

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) —Tommy Jacobs and Charlie Sifford led the way through the first round of the marathon 90-hole $50,000 Palm Springs Golf Classic Wedesday with six-under par while co-favorites Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer fell far down the line.

Palmer shot a 40-38—78, six strokes over par, in his worst round that anyone could recall as far back as 1961.

Nicklaus, who won the 1963 Palm Springs, had a 36-37—73, which left him one over par for the day.

Nicklaus, the Masters and PGA champion, was not too unhappy.

"I didn't play as bad as that score," he said. He explained that he took a double bogey six on the 14th when his ball lodged in a palm tree and he was unable to find it. It cost him a two-stroke lost ball penalty.

As 38 professionals bettered par on the four-par 36-36—72 courses employed for this massive operation, British Open champion Bob Charles of New Zealand, with 33-34, and Bob Goalby, with 34-33, tied at 67.

Wall Shoots 69

Bob Rosburg had 34-34—68, and tied at 69 were eight players.

They were Art Wall Jr., Don January, Doug Sanders, Jerry Pittman, Johnny Pott, Ted Kroll, Tom Nieporte and Bob Harrison.

National Open champion Julius Boros settled for a 71, Chi Chi Rodriguez, who won the recent San Francisco Lucky International in a playoff with January, had a 70.

The courses in play are Eldorado, Bermuda Dunes, Indian Wells and La Quinta.

Sifford, the 40-year-old five-time winner of the national Negro championship, had what he called his best round in four or five months. He had six birdies, three on each side of the La Quinta course.

The 28-year-old Jacobs, playing his home course of Bermuda Dunes, was sensational with his 31 on the last nine holes.

Both Palmer and Nicklaus played Eldorado.

Palmer had two double bogey sixes. He three-putted the fourth hole, and on the 14th he made the gross error of playing the ball of one of his amateur partners, which caused him two penalty strokes.

Palmer went over par on five other holes in his erratic tour.

Russians Cop Triumphs In Opener Of Olympics

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP)—Russia won the first gold medal of the 1964 Winter Olympics Wednesday when Ludmilla Belousova and Oleg Protopopov won the pairs figure skating championship in an upset over Germany's world champions, Marika Kilius and Hans-Juergen Baeumler.

It was the first time the Soviets ever had won an Olympic gold medal in figure skating.

The West German pair took the silver medal and Canada's Debbi Wilkes and Guy Revell took the third place bronze medal.

The Russians, a husband and wife team, scored 13 ordinal points and 104.4 total points. Miss Kilius and Baeumler had 15 ordinals and 103.6 total points. The Canadians had 35.5 ordinals and 98.5 points total.

Win In Hockey

The Soviet victory in figure skating, the first final event of the games that opened Wednesday, came after a 5-1 Russian hockey triumph over the United States, defending hockey champions.

The Russians, favored in the eight-nation hockey round robin, overcame a magnificent goaltending performance by injured Tom Yurkovich of Rochester, Minn., in the first competition of the Games.

The United States surprisingly took fourth place in the pairs skating as Vivian and Ronald Joseph of Highland Park, Ill., lost out to the Canadians by a slim margin in total points after getting the same ordinal score.

Seventh Place

Judianne and Jerry Fotheringill of Tacoma, Wash., at 19 and 21 the oldest of the U.S pairs, took seventh place and teenagers Cynthia and Ronald Kaufmann of Seattle finished eighth among 17 pairs.

Yurkovich, a 28-year-old machine company employe, held the powerful Soviet team to a single goal in the first period but took a bad spill injuring his left knee.

Forced to play the remainder of the game with ice pads on the knee, he was handicapped, yet he made 57 saves—some of them spectacular—to keep the contest from becoming a rout.

"If Yurkovich had had a bad day, it could have been 10-1," said the U.S. coach, Eddie Jeremiah of Hanover, N.H.

Skating Demon

Star of the Russian team was a crew-cut skating demon named Victor Yakushev. Refusing to wear the white crash helmet used by his teammates, he poured in two of his team's goals and led the relentless Soviet attack. The lone American goal was made by Jim Westby of Minneapolis in the third period.

The convincing triumph over the 1960 gold medalists at Squaw Valley, Calif., made the Russians an even stronger favorite to finish on top in the eight-team hockey round robin.

Two formidable rivals, Czechoslovakia and Canada also scored first-round victories in the championship bracket.

Trounce Germany

The Czechs trounced Germany 11-1 and the Canadians, led by Gary Dineen, won over Switzerland 8-0.

A full program is scheduled for Thursday, featured by the men's downhill ski race in which Bud Werner of Steamboat Springs, Colo., and Billy Kidd of Stowe, Vt., are the chief American hopes against Austria's world champions Egon Zimmerman and Karl Schranz.

The United States and the So-Viet Union, the two biggest sports nations, had their first confrontation of the games on the hockey rink less than an hour after Dr. Adolph Schaerf, the president of Austria, declared the 1964 Winter Olympics officially open.

Gay Attire

A total of 1,350 gaily attired athletes from 36 nations paraded at the base of the Bergisel ski jump before a crowd of 40,000, including the Shah and Empress of Iran. A red-jacketed Tyrolean band played gay tunes.

Paul Aste, an Austrian bobsledder, repeated the Olympic oath and then Jost Rieder, a former Austrian world ski champion, lighted the Olympic torch, which will burn steadily until the Games end Feb 9.

Speaking in bright, sunny weather, Avery Brundage of Chicago, president of the International Olympic Committee, called upon the competitors and officials to "set an example of sportsmanship which will further promote the high ideals of the Olympic movement."

A roll of drums echoed through the valleys. Bells rang out from every church steeple in Innsbruck.

NFL Looks Hard At Pact Of Rivals

MIAMI BEACH, Fla (AP) — National Football League owners were forced to take a new, hard look at the American Football League after the rival pro league signed a new five-year, $36-million television contract Wednesday with the National Broadcasting Co.

Officially, there was no comment on the new AFL deal that will bring approximately $900,000 a year to each of the eight member clubs starting in 1965.

"We are concerned only with our own National Football League, and we are very happy," said Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"No Such Plans"

Asked once again if there was any move toward a championship game with the AFL, Rozelle said, "We have no such plans."

Eastburg Mermen Downed

BETHLEHEM—East Stroudsburg High School's swimmers went down to a sixth straight defeat yesterday as Bethlehem won first places in all but one of the 10 events for a 66-20 victory.

Chuck Spencer, who flashed through the 100-yard freestyle event in 58.4 seconds, gained the first-place finish for the Cavalier mermen.

Spencer also finished second in the 50-yard freestyle race. Also placing second for the losers were Dick Alleger in the 200-yard individual medley and also the 100-yard backstroke, and Jim Wilkens in the 100-yard breaststroke.

The results:

200 medley relay—Bethlehem (Haslett, Jordan, Cope and B. Taylor). Time: 1:57.3.

Diving—Stahr (B), Dienel (B), Ron Decker (S). Pts.—115.7.

Urges Local Gathering To Meet Challenge

Muhlenberg Program Outlined

STROUDSBURG — Addressing an overflow gathering of the Lutheran Brotherhood of St. John's Lutheran Church Tuesday night, Dr. Erling N. Jensen, president of Muhlenberg College, Allentown, outlined the problems facing the population explosion on the campus are impressive and frightening," Dr. Jensen in a graphic manner demonstrated the effect they have on one small college. He urged the attendees to meet the challange.

Dr. Erling N. Jensen

Dr. Jensen, who holds degrees from Drake, Columbia and Iowa State, presented the changing picture of higher education in our century which has seen the leadership of private and church colleges pass over to the state colleges and universities.

He maintained that despite the tremendous expansion of public - financed institutions there is still a place for the small private college and it's disappearance would be tragic.

The colleges of the Lutheran Church are, in spite of the trend, he said, still keeping abreast of the population growth. Muhlenberg's enrollment has gone from 650 in 1953 to 1200 in 1963 and by 1973 should reach 1500.

It is hoped to hold at that figure to preserve the close relationship between faculty and student body, he said.

Muhlenberg college is a college of the Lutheran Synod of Eastern Pennsylvania, but Dr. Jensen emphatically stated that although preference map be given to members of this constituency it would never be at the sacrifice of academic excellence.

To admit a student who did not have the ability to finish would be a disservice to the college, the student and the church.

"Piety can never become a substitute for academic excellence" said Dr. Jensen.

Dr. Jensen then outlined the steps in Muhlenberg's plan for the future:

SCIENCE: Muhlenberg intends to keep its high rank in scientific studies but does not expect it will ever become a research center. Dr. Jensen who was senior physicist at the Atomic Energy Commission Laboratory at Iowa during the war, said that there will be limited research projects both in natural sciences and the humanities.

FACULTY: "Among Liberal Arts colleges Muhlenberg ranks with the best and every effort will be made to keep this status."

FACILITIES: The building program in the next ten years will cost over 9 million dollars and includes dormatories, a fine arts building, science building, library expansion and addition to the gymnasium.

ATHLETICS: A top ranking amatuer tennis player, Dr. Jensen said Muhlenberg believes in intercollegiate competition but will only schedule schools who, like Muhlenberg, give no preference in financial aid to athletes. "We are always interested in a top student that is also a good halfback."

FINANCES: To meet the challange of the future, Muhlenberg College will turn to every available source of income; federal grant; church support; the community; the Alumni and foundations, Dr. Jensen said, "We have a plan and we intend to put it into effect."

Lions Give Answers On Value Of Blood

STROUDSBURG -- The Stroudsburg Lions Club, sponsor of next Monday's blood drive at the Stroudsburg Presbyterian Church, is circulating questions and answers about this year - round Red Cross program.

Typical questions and answers are:

Q. Who can give blood?

A. Any person age 21 through 59 who is in good health and weighs 110 pounds or more. Those 18 through 20 years of age may also give blood, provided they have parental consent. But persons 18 through 20 who are in the Armed Forces or are married do not need parental consent.

Q. Does a donor experience any noticable effect from giving blood?

A. A healthy person should feel none whatever.

Q. Does giving blood lower resistance to illness?

A. No.

Q. What precautions are observed for the donor's safety?

A. For the safety of both donor ad the recipient of blood, each donor relates certain facts of his medical history. A nurse asks the donor about past illnesses. Then his blood pressure, temperature, pulse, weight and hemoglobin level are determined.

Q. How long does blood keep?

A. Twenty - one days is the present dating period for blood. Even after this long storage, 70 per cent of the red cells are still useful when transfused.

Q. Does the Red Cross charge for blood collected through its centers?

A. Never.

Must Be Tested

Q. Then why are some people charged following a transfusion?

A. Blood collected by the Red Cross is provided to physicians and hospitals for care of their patients. Before blood can be administered to a patient, it must be carefully tested and mixed with a sample of the recipient's blood (cross-matched) to be sure it will not cause a reaction. The cost of this laboratory work is usually borne by the patient. The Red Cross does not provide this service; it receives no part of the fees for these tests.

Q. Does the Red Cross blood program require replacement of blood?

A. No. Blood is supplied on the basis of medical need. It is recognized, however, that there is no magic source of blood. It comes only from the veins of individuals interested in supporting a blood program.

Q. How much blood does an individual patient need?

A. Sometimes only one or two pints, sometimes as many as 40 or more. It depends on his condition and what his physician decided is necessary to help him back to health.

Just Need To Apply

Q. Can I have blood supplied by the Red Cross free if I am hospitalized outside of Monroe County?

A. Yes. Any resident of Monroe County can secure blood from the Center if he is hospitalized outside of Monroe County by applying to the Red Cross office, Court House Square, Stroudsburg. It is best to apply before entering the hospital of your choice.

Q. When may women donate blood?

A. Anytime with the exception of during pregnancy and 12 months thereafter.

Suit Filed Against Bangor Man

EASTON -- A Williamsport resident filed suit yesterday against a Bangor man to recover damages from a fall on his property.

Guido Orlando of Williamsport filed the suit in Northampton County Court against Claude Jones of 812 Market St., Bangor.

Orlando says that he suffered injuries in a fall on a sidewalk covered with ice and snow. The fall, according to the suit, occurred on Dec. 27, 1962, on South Eighth St., Bangor.

The papers said there was a depression in the sidewalk caused by a sewer installation at the Jones property. Negligence is also claimed in that snow and ice were not removed from the sidewalk.

The suit, filed by Atty. Edward P. Turtzo, seeks damages in excess of $5,000 for injuries, which include a fracture of the right ankle.

Seeks Law To Curb Sale Of 'Canned Heat'

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Minority floor leader Charles R. Weiner, D-Philadelphia, Monday introduced a resolution calling for the Joint State Government Commission to investigate the feasibility of legislation to force the inclusion of emetics in "canned heat."

The senator said the "canned heat" has been responsible for 32 deaths in Philadelphia recently. He added that an emetic, which induces vomiting, would serve to discourage the drinking of the fluid by derelicts on skid row.

Weiner, who was joined in sponsoring the resolution by Sens. Anthony J. Di Silvestro, D-Philadelphia, and George J. Sarraf, D-Allegheny, said the legislation also should cover methyl and wood alcohol, sometimes used as a beverage by those who cannot afford legitimate liquor.

17 Classes For Monroe's Handicapped

Record Harrisburg Bureau

HARRISBURG -- The State Board of Education said yesterday it has approved 17 special education classes for handicapped pupils conducted in schools in Monroe County in the 1962-63 school year as meeting requirements for state funds to apply to the cost of these classes.

Monroe County school districts operated seven of the special classes on a district basis. The Monroe County Board of School Directors provided 10 classes in schools in the county.

All classes conducted by the school districts were for mentally retarded pupils. These districts were Stroud Union and Pocono Mountain for pupils on both elementary and high school levels.

East Stroudsburg and Pleasant Valley for elementary pupils are in this category.

The county board operated classes for mentally retarded pupils in Minisink Hills and East Stroudsburg schools, for "trainable" pupils in Reeders schools and for physically handicapped in East Stroudsburg.

Classes for visually handicapped and in speech correction were also conducted by the county board in various schools in the county.

All Approved

All classes were approved on recommendation of the State Department of Public Instruction, which directs the special Education program in schools throughout the state.

State funds for classes operated by the county board were provided at the opening of the schoool year. Granting of state funds to the county board is dependent upon compliance with regulations in conducting classes during the previous year.

School districts receive reimbursement from state funds for classes they provide after the classes are approved by the state board.

The county board and school districts received in state funds the difference in cost of teaching a pupil in special education classes and a normal pupil in regular classes, the department said.

Pocono Art Center Buys Clubhouse

MINISINK HILLS—The Pocono Art Center has purchased a seven-room house adjacent to the proposed site for a new art center and symphony hall for the Philadelphia Orchestra summer music festival in the Poconos.

It will be used as a temporary art center, clubhouse, and guest house for Eugene Ormandy, conductor and music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, when he comes here for two opening concerts on August 11 and 12.

The house was purchased from Residential Investments, Inc., which has donated 42 acres adjacent to the house for the new art center. It is on Mt. Nebo Rd. at a point where a dirt road runs into the art center's 42-acre property.

Office space will be arranged to superintend activities of the center directed by Mrs. William Kenawell, president, and Miss Eva Hess, membership chairman.

Gourmet Club

Mrs. Marcia Clapp DeRocco, chairman of the art center board, who announced the purchase,, said the house will also be the home of an art center Gourmet Club.

She said a one-acre garden behind the house "with old lilac bushes, two fine old apple trees and a peach tree" will be enclosed with a basket weave fence for use by art center members outside art shows.

Mrs. De Rocco said chamber music, folk singing and dancing is also planned in the enclosed area for members.

A brick dining patio is also planned for 200 people.

The Gourmet Club will entertain orchestra members after concerts in this outdoor garden, Mrs. De Rocco said.

Two rooms on the second floor of the house will be used as studios for art classes until workshops in a new building are complete.

Pennsylvanians Live Longer

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The State Health Department reported Monday that the average Pennsylvanian lives longer than the average person in the nation as a whole.

The Department report indicated the median age of death of Pennsylvanians is 70.3 years. In the entire nation it is 68.7 years. The median age is the line which divides the population into two groups. Theoretically, half of Pennsylvania's people die before they have reached 70 years and four months. The other half is older than the median at death.

The median age of the Pennsylvania population was 32.1 years in 1962. In other words, half the state's 11,375,000 persons were older than 32. In contrast the median age for the nation in 1960 when the last census was taken was 29.5 years.

In slightly more than 50 years, the median age at death in Pennsylvania has better than doubled. The average age in 1910 was 34 years while the U.S. median was 40.6 years.

Judge Rhodes To Finish 30 Years On High Court

STROUDSBURG — The Honorable Chester H. Rhodes will complete a long and distinguished career as a Pennsylvania Superior Court jurist Jan. 1, 1965.

The Monroe County judge will retire after 30 years service on the Superior Court bench. It was a career that saw Judge Rhodes singled out as one of the state's top legal minds.

Rhodes, President Judge of the Superior Court, disclosed Sunday that he will definitely not seek re-election to the 10-year term he has held for three successive terms.

Born In Gouldsboro

The judge was born in Gouldsboro, Wayne County, on Oct. 19, 1887, the son of Arthur L. and Stella Hager Rhodes. This past November he was honored by the Monroe County Bar Assn. for having completed 50 years of legal practice.

He has been a public servant since 1918, when he was appointed Monroe County solicitor. In 1919 he was elected county district attorney, a post he held until 1922, when he resigned to seek election to the state House of Representatives.

Judge Rhodes was elected to the House and was subsequently re-elected in 1924, 1926, 1930 and 1932.

He began his education in public schools and went on to the School of Lackawanna in Scranton; Muhlenberg College and was graduated from Lehigh University with a bachelor of arts degree in 1910 and a master of arts in 1912.

Since becoming a judge in 1934, he has received honorary degrees of doctor of laws from Pennsylvania Military College in 1938; Muhlenburg College in 1949; Gettysburg College in 1956, and Dickinson School of Law in 1959.

Among the college honorary societies he belongs to are the Omicron Delta Kappa and Alpha Epsilon Circle fraternaties at Muhlenberg.

Rhodes was named president judge, after being re-elected to the Superior Court in 1944, by Gov. John C. Bell Jr. He succeeded Edward Martin, who resigned to make a successful bid for a U.S. Senate seat.

One of the judge's singular accomplishments in a citation he received from former Gov. John S. Fine. The citation reads in part:

"A singularly successful jurist in the dispensation of justice under the laws of the Commonwealth, Judge Chester H. Rhodes has successfully and eminently served the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as president judge of the Superior Court.

"His legal opinions are demonstrative of his knowledge of jurisprudence and his deep concern for the equitable dispensation of the law in the courts of the Commonwealth.

Meritorious Medal

"Held in the highest esteem by the legal profession of Pennsylvania, Judge Rhodes has earned the gratitude of the citizens of Pennsylvania.

"In recognition of his valuable and outstanding service to the courts of Pennsylvania, we do hereby award him the Meritorious Service Medal of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania."

The medal was presented to Rhodes on Jan. 18, 1955, the day Gov. George M. Leader was inaugurated, replacing Fine.

Judge Rhodes was married to Helen M. Hauser in Stroudsburg in November, 1912. They have one son, Dr. John F. Rhodes of Lehighton. They live at 706 Monroe St., Stroudsburg.

Hon. Judge Chester H. Rhodes

Local Soldier Perfect Example Of Job, Man Blend

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Army assignment procedures meshed man and job together prefectly in the case of newly promoted Specialist Fourth Class William E. Custard of Stroudsburg.

Custard is presently attending an advanced course in the technology of data processing equipment here in Columbus and pointed toward his Army assignment in the Finance Office. XX US Army Corps, Fort Hayes, when he graduated from Churchman's Business College, Easton, Pa., in 1961.

He entered the Army shortly thereafter and was immediately assigned to a career field in which his abilities and interests lay and sent to the Army Finance School's 10-week course at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Ind.

Outstanding Aptitude

Shortly after assignment here, Custard revealed outstanding aptitude for data processing equipment and its uses. Only last month, XX Corps received authorization to mechanize payroll preparation and Custard, with theory and practice pained at the Army Finance School on top of his civilian educational background, was selected to program the new procedures.

Although this command had mechanized previously on punch tape equipment, conversion to tabular operation increased the flexibility of the finance office here where nearly 60,000 accounts are now processed quarterly. Custard was selected to supervise the operation of the equipment and the work of 10 people, both civilian and military.

Custard's career field is now linked with electronic computation. Whether he elects to stay in service or apply his background to civilian date processing, he'll be competent as a skilled technician in a highly selective occupation.

Son of Mrs. Hazel Custard, 1729 Pokono Ave., Stroudsburg, Custard graduated from Stroud Union High School in 1959. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Butz, also of Stroudsburg.

MARINE PVT. CHARLES E. STRUNK Jr., son of Charles Strunk Sr., 420 Main St., Stroudsburg, has completed recruit training at Parris Island, S. C. He is now stationed at Camp LeJeune, N. C.

Kipps Visit Grave Of JFK

GREENTOWN — "Not a minute of any day goes by without someone visiting the grave of the late president, John F. Kennedy," reported Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Kipp, of Lake Paupac, who returned home recently after spending a week touring Washington, D.C.

The Kipps visited the grave and were impressed by the steady stream of visitors even two months after the president was assassinated.

Among the highlights of their trip South were tours of the White House, Capitol, Air and Space buildings, Museum of Natural History, Smithsonian Institution, the Botannical Gardens, the Ford Theatre Museum, the house where President Lincoln died, the Custis-Lee Mansion, Mt. Vernon, the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, the Lincoln Memorial and Washington Monument, and Arlington National Cemetery.

Cy Barrett Says

Insured Savings

By Cyrus Barrett, Jr.

DEAR CY:

A lady we know had $500 in a bank savings account insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. The bank shut down (not for repairs), and she couldn't get her money out, although it was insured by the government. Because she had a loan from the same bank, it took her savings money and used it to pay off as much of her loan as possible. Before the collapse, she had a long time for repaying the loan and had put up decent collateral. Is this protection? Not in my pass book!

LENA DE YOUNG

DEAR LENA:

Few banks, in recent years, had folded, hence the unfairness you describe was not generally recognized. Until the razor tickled, nobody screamed. Known as "compulsory offset," the rule has now been changed. Hereafter, insured savings accounts, with less than $10,000 in banks, cannot be invaded for repayment of loans in case the institution liquidates . . . unless loan repayments are delinquent. Savings accounts (also under $10,000) at savings and loans, insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance corporation, receive the same protection.

CY

DEAR CY:

Having lost a hand in a factory accident, I find making a living as a handicapped person difficult. I am hoping you can help me. I have written several companies for money making deals, but they sell products for people like me to assemble. We must find buyers, I figure. I'll get something already made and sell it. There are plenty of opportunities working on straight commission, but can a man with only one hand become a salesman? I like dealing with people but will they like me?

FRED LE FEVRE

DEAR FRED:

During two hot and humid summers in the valley of the Mississippi, I sold hosiery house-to-house. A stellar salesman on our crew was Bill Schroeder, who had lost his right arm and three fingers of his left hand. Known endearingly as "the one armed bandit," he sold with sincerity and devotion to the cause of honest representation. Bill built a large clientele of loyal repeat customers. He supported himself and his family for many years through year 'round earnings as a professional salesman before retirement. Forget the home assembly deals. I have yet to see one which is bullet-proof. If you genuinely like people, they're bound to like you.

CY

DEAR CY:

The apathetic plush seaters of industry are playing into the hands of the communists. If influential top business had to worry about their next meal and a roof over their heads, they would be aware of how they are ruining older workers. Some company retirement programs overrule hiring near-retirement workers. Many of the job applicants have no spouses or other assistance to keep them active or independent.

MISS 50-PLUS

DEAR MISS 50-PLUS:

Salaried job applicants over 55 are persona non grata (Latin for poison ivy). Companies feel they will not be able to put in enough years under their employe benefit plans to receive a satisfactory income upon retirement. Bad publicity, it is believed, would result. Firms often hire part-time workers in this category because they normally are not included under their pension, profit sharing, or group insurance plans. I'm all for dynamiting the apathetic, but why make influential top business your target? Many became influential and top because they hated living in apathy and poverty.

Greene, Dreher Completes Plans For School Move

NEWFOUNDLAND — The Greene and Dreher Township School Boards, meeting recently at the Newfoundland Elementary Center with J. Robert Burdick presiding, completed final arrangements for the move to the Wallenpaupack Area Joint Junior-Senior High School.

The board approved the new elementary school schedule running from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. The schedule calls for two 15-minute recess periods, a 45 - minute lunch period; and the remainder of the time for instruction.

Clayton Northup, principal, reported that John Cunningham has assumed custodial duties at the elementary center, and that Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Moraski have begun their work at the new school.

A Type A, or student lunch, will be served at the new school on January 30 to board members and others who have made reservations, in order to give the cafeteria staff "practice" in serving in the new location.

On Feb. 1, board members and their wives or husbands, and all board members who served from 1961 through 1963, and are not now on the board, will have a dinner at the new school.

Permission was granted to Joseph Staley for use of the school on February 20 and March 3 at 1:30 p.m. for agricultural extension meetings.

Bills totaling $233.26 were approved for payment by the joint board.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCIS DRAKE

Thursday, January 30, 1964

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — This is not a time to venture forth in search of "greener pastures." Stick to the tried and proven or some things could get out of hand. Watch budget.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — Do not be overly concerned with setbacks, opposition. Taken philosophically, they can be teachers, stabilizers. Perform in your innately befitting manner — and happily.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — Harvests from past efforts should be substantial, but some may be delayed; do not chafe, be extra patient. A good chance to display your ingenuity and know-how.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Lunar influences now suggest prudence, deliberating well before taking any action. Don't toss up a coin nor decide in a haphazard way as others may. Be painstaking.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — Don't leave yourself open to needless criticism. Know what you must do and HOW to go about it. With others observing your example, you could be a potent leader.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Your competition will be keen now, yet there is plenty of room for your talents. Display them with discriminating taste. There are good things in the offing.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Neither renege on promises nor attempt too much. Both extremes are likely now. Accept only what better sense recognizes will suit the day and good purpose. Be selective, not gullible.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Mars, favorable, suggests that you put forth the very best efforts possible, but without overtaxing yourself. Just that one extra try, that special genial word may turn a big tide for you.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — Because you did not succeed before at what you believed a worthwhile endeavor does not mean you will not now — IF it is still as worthwhile. Keep up with meaningful changes.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) — Matters may get off to a quick start in the A.M. Look carefully over your system, methods; try harder for surer satisfaction. The effort alone will reward many times over.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Mixed planetary influences. Right plans and moves at the right times and places will keep you in the lead for gains, with ease of effort.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — Good Neptune influences favor normal routine, as well as the launching of new enterprises. Deliberate, then act. Try a master stroke.

YOU BORN TODAY are ready for life and new interests as a constant diet. Normally a cooperative partner, you may, however, go about things in your own way, forgetting to consult those concerned in plans. You dislike dissension, may let even some wrongs persist rather than "have unpleasant words," which only worsens the situation. When your emotions take over, you use your true capacity for clear sightedness, your mental vision blurs.

Religion, Discipline, Home Keys To Law-Abiding Youth, Panel Feels

By BOBBY WESTBROOK
Family Page Editor

STROUDSURG — Why is the juvenile delinquency rate so much lower for Jews? In the Chinatown section of big cities?

"Records show that very few Jewish teenagers get in trouble with the law," Rev. J. William Giles, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Stroudsburg pointed out in a panel on problems of youth held at his church Tuesday night.

"In Judaism, the whole religion is initiated in the home. Parents explain the religious rites which are an integral part of their home life. The same can be said of Oriental religions. Chinatown has less juvenile delinquency than other sections of a city, and there, too, the religion begins in the home," he added.

Atty. Arlington Williams

The panel whose topic was "Answering the Questions of Youth" was introduced by Mrs. William Pipher at the open meeting of the Women's Assn. of the church and which had attracted a large audience.

Arlington Williams, attorney known for his work among probationers through the Kiwanis Youth Committee, and his activities with young people in the Sunday School served as moderator.

"Our basic mistake may be worrying so much about the problems of youth which are not problems separate and distinct from the problems facing our whole civilization," he said. "The rise in crimes of violence, the decline of morality, maladjustment to the environment leading to drop-outs, can't be attributed to the perversity — or failure — of youth alone.

Selfishness of Adults

"The basic causes must be sought in the selfishness of adults, their selfishness and failure to fulfill their obligations of parents.

"Where are our priorities?" he asked. "If as adults we lived up to our creed that our first priority is to love God, we would not neglect the spiritual training of our children through laziness, indifference and selfishness."

Youth itself had some say on the panel in the person of Mary Lou Lillius, a junior at Bucknell University.

"Society in general may bear some of the blame," she admitted. "But often adults don't realize that we have problems. In a world where everything is considered relative, we want to be told what is wrong. To discuss right and wrong with someone who speaks with authority. The church could speak with such authority.

Get There First

"But it needs to reach us when we are young, to get there first, to schedule more activities at the church so that it isn't just an hour a week observance."

Edward Bollard, who leads a young adult group in the church, confirmed her statements. "Young people want discipline," he insisted. "They have to rebel, try to get their own way, but underneath they want parents, their teachers, their teen-age group leaders to be firm in standing for the right.

Mrs. Walter McClelland, a mother of four children, also affirmed "The power of the positive 'no'".

"We are sometimes afraid of our children," she admitted. "We want them to like us. We want to give them everything, but we are really doing them no kindness. A child who has never been frustrated before the age of six is in for a hard time in life."

Conformity Can Boomerang

Mrs. McClelland laid another charge at the parents' feet. "We want them to conform, to wear what the other children wear, to do what other children do. But conformity can boomerang when they reach the age when what other children do is wrong."

In speaking of the spiritual development necessary for developing a whole person, Rev. William Giles reminded the audience:

"When parents bring their child for baptism I ask them 'Do you promise to raise your child in the nurture and admonition of God?' I have never had a parent answer 'no' but their later conduct often indicates that they were giving merely lipservice. There must be a ministry to children in the home as well as in the church, and parents must take time to share their spiritual resources with their children.

"But parents must first have those spiritual resources themselves," he added ruefully.

Mrs. J. L. Cohen, a parent, and grandparent and active for many years as a Girl Scout leader, stressed the value of an individual approach.

"An adult can get through to a single child much more easily than in a group," she said, "whether that group is the family circle, a Sunday school class or a Scout group.

Line of Communication

"It is important to maintain a line of communication. Arguments, disagreements, and resentment at discipline often break that communication in every home; but once tempers have cooled down it is important that the parent restore that line of communication. When parents can't get through to the children and children can't talk things over with their parents, you've got trouble," she said.

Mrs. Cohen also stressed the importance of example in importing morals. "And that doesn't just mean that you must be an example to your own children but to all the children your life touches. If you are interested in them and show it, you, as an individual, can do something about morals."

An open discussion followed the panel.

Two Hurt As Car Hits Pole

CANADENSIS — Two Canadensis women were reported injured Tuesday when a car in which they were riding skidded on Rt. 290 about one-half mile south of Canadensis and hit a utility pole.

Mrs. Lyle Upright, driver of the car, said she lost control on the icy road while traveling north, skidded, struck two guard rails and went over a four-foot embankment and hit a utility pole.

Her passenger, Mrs. Lee Brown of Canadensis, struck the windshield of the car and received medical treatment as did Mrs. Upright.

Damage was estimated at $250 by Harry Campbell, Barrett Township police chief.

Northeast Bank Elects 2 Directors

SCRANTON — Northeastern Pennsylvania National Bank and Trust Co. elected two new directors at their annual meeting yesterday in Scranton. Northeastern operates a branch bank at Mt. Pocono.

The new directors are Donald D. Tretheway of Kingston, and Joseph Harlam of Hazleton.

Tretheway has been a member of Northeastern National's Associate Board of Wilkes-Barre since the 1958 merger of the Wilkes-Barre Deposit and Savings Bank into Northeastern National.

He is president of his own brokerage firm and in 1963 was elected Eastern Regional Director of the National Food Brokers Assn.

Harlam is active in the management of Harban Coal and Contracting Co., Jocurt Coal Co., and the Real Estate Company of New York City.

He is president of the Winton Coal Mining Co. of Tamaqua.

Harlam was a director of the former Traders Bank and Trust Company for many years before the merger into Northeastern National.

The only object in the White House from the time of its first occupancy by President John Adams in 1800 is the famous full-length portrait of George Washington by Gilbert Stuart. The painting hangs in the East Room one of the rooms open to the public.

Politics Charged In Pa. Hospital

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Sen. William V. Mullin, D-Philadelphia, Monday charged on the Senate floor that "politics is running rampant" at the Philadelphia State Hospital.

Mullin, calling for a legislative investigation of the institution and its administrator, Dr. Eugene L. Sielke, told the Senate that patients and staff members of the hospital have complained to him that conditions are "deplorable."

The senator urged Gov. William W. Scranton to press for the probe "in the interest of the little person and the one in trouble."

"Conditions in the wards and service to the patients are lower now than ever before" Mullin said. "We are going back to the days before the state's mental health program. Things are running roughshod there and the conditions are deplorable."

Cy Barrett Says

Power Behind Drone

DEAR CY:
My father is 69 years old and fidgets all day long doing absolutely nothing. Until retirement four years ago, he was hale and full of good humor. As of now, Dad is a grouch. What type of work could he do, in our fairly large city, to earn close to (but under) $1,200 per year? At one time or another in his checkered career, Dad was a public relations man, salesman, and athletic director for a small college.
OLLIE

DEAR OLLIE:
Exhort Pops to go after a job selling memberships to trade and civic organizations. I know of a retiree who spends 16 to 18 hours a week soliciting memberships for a sales executives' association. For each new member roped into the brotherhood, he receives a commission. He stays younger through the stimulation of business and gladhands the income.

Damping-Off Disease Problem

By George Abraham

START YOUR OWN SEED— One of the biggest bugaboos in starting your own seed indoors is "damping-off" disease. After the seedlings have reached the height of an inch or so they suddenly lop over and die at the soil line. This is due to various organisms in the soil and it can be quite discouraging, especially when it happened to expensive seed.

You can eliminate or prevent damping-off by one of two methods: (1) Sow seed in soil substitutes, such as vermiculite, sand, peat, etc., or by (2) Sterilizing your soil mixture before sowing. Bake your soil mix in a moderate oven (250 degs. F) for ½ hour, and allow to cool before sowing. Or you can pressure - cook the soil at 5 lbs pressure for 20 minutes.

If you have a small greenhouse and start a lot of seed, then resort to the formaldehyde treatment.

Add 2½ tablespoons of formalin to one cup of water, then spring sprinkle this on a bushel of soil. Mix it well. Cover with a plastic sheet and wait 2 to 3 days before sowing.

You can do a lot to keep your seedlings alive by proper sowing and watering. Next week we'll cover these topics.

PALMS — These are among our finest indoor foliage plants. The Paradise Palm (Kentia fosteriana) is the one florists use for weddings and special events. One of the nicest palms for the home is the dwarf known as Neanthe bella, a regular miniature tree that sometimes flowers indoors.

All palms have the same culture: thorough watering (never soggy soils), filtered sunlight, a liquid feeding 3 or 4 times a year, and a bath or shower once a month or so. The chief enemy of most palms is dry air, especially the dward palm.

Palms need more water in winter when the air is dry. If your palm leaves have started to turn brown at the tips or edges, it's a sign of dryness.

You can start palms from seed purchased from seedhouses. Sow in a sand peat mixture. It takes seed a year to ripen and from 2 to 15 months for them to germinate.

STRAWBERRIES — Choosing the best varieties is not easy. Fairfax is still one of the best berries for the home garden. Berries are firm and have a nice bright red color when they first ripen.

The fruit darkens on holding and thus Fairfax is not recommended for roadside stands. An outstanding variety, high in flavor and quality. Premier (also sold as Howard 17) is still a favorite, even though better varieties have replaced it.

Berries are early, of fair quality and plants are frostproof, resistant to leaf spot disease, leaf scorch and are somewhat tolerant of virus. It's a heavy yielder, grows under nearly all soil conditions. It's still the old favorite early berry.

RHODODENDRONS — Some of our readers are becoming alarmed over their rhododendrons. What causes the leaves to take on a yellowish color, or why do they curl up and hang like a bunch of bananas?

It's natural for the foliage to pale up a bit in winter, and it's also natural for them to curl around the edges and droop like a bunch of bananas. These are nothing to worry about. However, if the leaves have spots or dried areas along the edges, it's due to winter scorch. This can be blamed on hot dry winds, low soil moisture and bright sun.

Rhododendrons which have a good mulch of sawdust, peat or oakleaves suffer less from winter scorch than those unmulched.

The safest method for preventing this problem is to use a screen of burlap to shunt off the wind and sun. Also, you could spray with one of the plastic anti-desiccant materials now on the market.

CLOVER MITES -- Ever see those tiny little reddish objects (smaller than the head on a pin) climbing over your windowsills, foundation of your home, cellar windows, bedroom and bathroom walls? These are clover mites and are they tough! Cold weather doesn't seem to halt their march, although they do want to get indoors in winter.

Once inside they will not eat rugs, furniture or wallpaper, or even paint, as many believe. They just rest there until spring when they start their trip to the lawn. These mites are so tough we've seen them traveling over snow in cold weather.

What do they live on? Indoors, they'd eat your house plants if necessary. Outdoors, they live, feed and multiply on grasses, plants, shrubs and trees.

CONTROL — It's not simple! Aramite has been recommended at the rate of 2 tablespoons of 25 per cent liquid in 1 gallon of water. Malathion is another material that's helpful. However, of the pesticides we've used, sulfur plus rotenone seems most effective when dusted around the foundation.

Sulfur will stain paint, so keep it off the surface. Sulfur and rotenone kill by contact, that is, the mites must touch the chemicals before they're killed.

PHLOX -- Folks glancing through the perennial catalogs are wondering if there is a garden phlox which will resist mildew, the disease that causes buds to blight and leaves to dry up.

No variety is immune to this fungus disease. However, you can prevent it by dusting the plants, in summer, using Karathane, or sulfur dust. Be sure to apply either before the disease strikes, because after it sets in it's impossible to eradicate it.

PRAYER PLANT — The Maranta ("Prayer plant" or "rabbit track" plant) is one of our best foliage plant, noted for its attractive markings. The name "prayer" plant comes from the fact that the leaves turn upward on their stems at night like folded hands.

The paired chocolate brown spots on the leaves accounts for the name "rabbit track" plant. Culture: This item likes to be warm. Avoid a cool night temperature (no less than 60 degrees).

Shade from direct sun as the thin leaves scorch easily. Maranta likes a moist soil, one that drains well. Avoid overwatering as it rots quickly.

Plants more or less rest in winter so go easy on feeding them. You can multiply the plant by division any time of the year. Just make sure the soil has plenty of sand and peat moss in it.

Troubles: Rotting of leaves is due to overwatering or low night temperature. Loss of coloring markings is natural as plants mature. The juvenile plants are more attractive since they retain their attractive markings.

SEEDLESS WATERMELONS -- About 8 years ago seedless watermelons came on the American scene and we were one of the first to grow them. This novelty has been tried by many gardeners.

Some have been disappointed to find that when the melon is cut open there are whitish translucent seeds in the seedless melon. In eating the fruit you'd never notice them, and they aren't worth worrying about. Sometimes the seeds (Ovules) are completely absorbed in the flesh to a degree where they are scarcely visible.

Sometimes a normal sized black seed will develop in the seedless melon, but usually it's hollow. In spite of these, it's still fun to grow the sterile hybrid seedless watermelons. Such seed is harder to germinate and needs extra heat for best results.

GODETIA: A short while ago we asked our readers to tell us if they liked this "unsung hero" or the annual garden. Many wrote to tell us this is an excellent flower and that their gardens would be incomplete without it.

One reader writes: "Once you start them from seed, you always have plenty of plants.

They always reseed themselves in spring. I take up the Godetia seedlings and set them where I want them to grow permanently.

"They are hardy and as cut flowers for the house, they are beautiful and long lasting. It's a good idea to start new plants from seed every other year, since some of the colors have a tendency to run out."

DIEFFENBACHIA: Is yours geting too tall for your room? Don't be afraid to cut the top out to shorten the plant. You can root the top in a gallon (wide mouth) jug containing ordinary tap water.

Within two or three months the rooted top can be potted up also make a new top for you, and you'll have a nice new plant. The mother plant will and in addition it will be a bushier plant.

Question Box

QUESTION OF THE WEEK — F. R. of Stroudsburg : "For two years now I've tried to raise lima beans, with no luck. The plants are nice and healthy, produce lots of blossoms but no pods set. I planted both pole and bush beans and used seed from two different seed companies. What's the reason for my failure?"

I think the big reason is the temperature. Hot days and cool nights prevent the blooms from setting, hence no beans.

Hot weather also causes the blossoms to shed, as will a dry soil. Also soil acidity has a bearing on the blooms setting. Large limas should have a soil acidity reading of around 6, which means slightly acid or almost neutral.

If the soil is highly acid you get a poor crop. A simple soil test will tell you how acid the soil is and you can add lime to correct it.

Also, I'd feed the plants a balanced plant food, since too little nitrogen could mean no beans forming.

I suggest you try the "Baby limas", since they are often more dependable producers.

In most cases the pole lima beans are of better quality than the bush kinds. They produce more in a small area. All limas do best on fairly heavy soils not too rich.

H.D. of Bangor: "A friend of mine gave me a miniature rose for indoor care. Will it bloom indoors? What care does it

Yes, the miniature rose does well as a house plant. It needs 4 to 6 hours of sun daily. It'll do with less sun, but will not blossom. Reset period is in late autumn, with no plant food and a reduced water supply.

Keep them on a cool porch in autumn, and for winter bloom, keep them in a warm, sunny window, over a pan of water. They grow about 10 inches tall, with flowers about 1 inch across.

Colors range through white, yellow, orange, red, pink and crimson.

FREE: Want to know more bout these dwarf house plants? Send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope and ask for a copy of my booklet, HOW TO GROW MINIATURE ROSES IN THE GARDEN AND IN THE HOME. This illustrated guide is packed full of good tips on feeding, pest care, pruning, etc., ideal for the home library.

C. B. of Cresco: "I have a nice Jerusalem Cherry and would like to know how to care for it after it sheds its cherries."

Keep plant in a bright cool window and keep it watered. In May, after danger of frost is over you can plant it outdoors. Cut it back ½ to give it shape and let it grow all summer.

If you don't want to keep the mother plant, start new ones from seed found in the round (poisonous) fruit.

Pen Argyl Board Accepts Resignation, Hires Sub

PEN ARGYL — Pen Argyl Joint School Committee this week accepted the resignation of one teacher, added a teacher to the substitute list, and appointed a supervisor of the intramural wrestling program.

The resignation of Theodore Hoffman was approved. He is a science teacher in the junior high school. His resignation will become effective June 30.

Mrs. Ethel H. Werner was added to the substitute list. She has 21 years teaching experience.

Named supervisor of the intramural wrestling program at a salary of $100 was Robery Lakey. It is the hope of the board that wrestling will become a part of the school's extracurricular in the future.

In other action the board decided to purchase the public address system used on the athletic field during the football season from Maurice R. Everett, of Easton, at a cost of $453.50 with the rental of $175 paid during the football season applied against the price.

Mrs. Olive Savitz, cafeteria manager, was authorized to obtain quotations for a 30 cubic foot food freezer containing one upright door for use in the Wind Gap Elementary School cafeteria.

A report was given by representatives of the band boosters club and was recognized by the board as outstanding. The board thanked the club for doing a good job with the band.

The board voted to execute the form of release from the insurance company for $159.95 for damage done to a clothes dryer in the building on Jan. 18. The board also voted to replace the dryer destroyed by fire at a cost not to exceed $150.

The construction and utilization of a temporary addition to the stage for the Spring concerts with Daniel Ruggiero, building maintenance supervisor in charge of erection and inspection, was approved. The board gave the supervising principal's office authority to advertise for bids for one set of kettle drums and two Sousaphones, both brass and fiber glass.

The board also decided not to allow the attendance of instructional and service staffs of the district at state and national conventions until a policy for future events can be set up.

The board decided to proceed to adopt a staff salary schedule with the supervising principal, William E. Madden, submitting a proposed policy coming from the committee comprised of staff members and for final acceptance by the board.

The board delegated authority to Madden to approve reasonable fund raising activities that are consistent with the needs and objectives of an adequate extracurricular program until the board adopts a policy pertaining to these fund-raising activities. The board studied the figures submitted on a lunch program pertaining to the Pen Argyl Elementary school and asked for more operative information.

It also authorized Madden to allow student government field trips to broaden the pupils' interest in the school and to try and gain more school spirit among the students.

A contribution to Dr. John A. Turlzo for his services to the athletic program of the Pen Argyl Area Joint High School was voted by the Pen Argyl Area Joint School Board at a meeting last night in the library of the senior high school.

The board decided to purchase diplomas from the E. A. Wright Company at a cost of $2.55 a diploma on a five-year contract.

The treasurer reported a balance in the general account as of Jan. 27, of $20,677.45 and a balance in the athletic fund as of Jan. 20, of $10,515.41. Bills totaling $57,162.38 were ordered paid.

Asks New View Of Red Cuba

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—Brazil's chief U.N. delegate Tuesday called for a new look at the Western Hemisphere's policy toward the Cuban government of Fidel Castro.

Ambassador Carlos Bernardes took issue with anti - Cuban measures taken by some governments and suggested a moratorium on such measures, as a first step toward improving relations between Cuba and other countries of the hemisphere.

He told newsmen at a luncheon that Cuba should never have been suspended from the Organization of American States, but instead should be treated the same as Communist countries outside the hemisphere.
